THEATRICAL

AT THE MAJESTIC
While in all fairness to her youthful years and inexperience it must be said that Baby Norine is the star of Milt Frankford's offering at the Majestic this week, she is certainly in excellent company from first to last. Her singing and natural histrionic powers have won for her instant recognition as a little actress bound to climb in her chosen field. Her personality is of that winsome, winning type that is seldom cultivated successfully, but must be given one at a birth.

As a partner, smiling George makes an excellent team mate for Baby Norine. The boy too has a personality and a stage presence of his own, having mastered the trick of working in little unwritten "business" in his lines with great effectiveness. Their duets are unusually good because their voices blend so well together.

Frankford is a clever comedian, and he adds to that his almost uncanny ability as a trick pianist, playing two tunes at the same time and whistling a third. Again, he clogs a lively inter while accompanying himself upon the piano. His turns are all well applauded.

Acrobatic dancing, when well performed, is always guaranteed to entertain any audience. In this role Billy Mack more than qualifies, and his limber, lanky, graceful steps go well with his double jointed ability. In turns as a comedian, also, he demonstrates his right to be classed in a team with Milt Frankford himself.

There is in all six feet to Art Newman, all of it fun from first to last. The trio composed of Frankford, Mack and Newman work together with splendid results.

The chorus can sing and dance, and are in no manner handicapped by limited wardrobe. The scenery is good and the electrical effects pleasing. On the whole, one may consider the show a success because it is clean, yet snappy and offered with innovations.

Lighting Bryce, a tale of the big outdoor west, bids fair to prove a well liked serial. Featuring Ann and Jack Hoxie, the action of the narrative plunges at once into a thrilling mystery.

Matinee, 3:30 p. m.; nights, 7:30 and nine p. m.

AT THE GALAXY
Ediel Clayton in "The Thirteenth Commandment."

Ford Sterling in "A Lady's Tailor." What is your idea of what a wife ought to be? Do you like the pretty one who make the men in the audience crane their necks when you escort her to the theatre, but who cannot scramble eggs or make drinkable coffee? Or do you prefer the domestic kind who keep your house spotless and are natural born cooks, but who always greet you in apron and dusting cap and are always too tired to go out evenings? Rupert Hughes' great novel, "The Thirteenth Commandment," the picture in which Ediel Clayton is at the Galaxy, will tell you about still another type of wife. To describe her would spoil the pleasure you will derive from the picture.

An added attraction of real merit is the Sennet comedy featuring Ford Sterling, "A Lady's Tailor." The most wonderful bathing scenes ever photographed are shown in "A Lady's Tailor," in which the Mack Sennet bathing girls are shown frolicking in the surf under the light of the Southern California moon. These moonlight bathing pictures were taken while the rest of the country was fighting the cold of early winter.

AT THE STRAND
Bryant Washburn in "Too Much Johnson."

The Strand has booked one of those funny mix-up comedies for today and tomorrow with Bryant Washburn as star. You know, one of those pictures which keeps you laughing from the first title and doesn't let you stop until the lights go on. Honest, it's that kind.

It's called "Too Much Johnson," and it's from the famous farce by William Fillette—the man who wrote "Secret Service" and other big dramas. He's just as good at comedies as he is at thrills, as you'll know when you've seen this one, his best.

Lois Wilson, who appeared with Washburn in his latest picture, "It Pays to Advertise," also leads in this. And the same director made it—Donald Crisp. It's a Paramount Artcraft, and it's a dandy.

A committee of the general assembly of the Southern Presbyterian church meets at Memphis today to consider plans of either organic union or federation with the Northern Presbyterian church, the two churches having been divided by the civil war.
