

all kinds of people. Some of the ladies that come in are selfish. You know how it is—they're wrapped up in themselves. They never think of being pleasant. But we just don't pay a bit of attention to them. There's too many that are nice for the others to bother us."

"This girl wore black earrings dangling from her blonde curls and a black gown. The visit scars in the case and the children wails hanging back of her made an appropriate setting. "I'd rather be in this department than any where else," she finished. "But of course I do get awfully tired some times. I do wish we could have shorter hours."

At the last store visited one of the girls said, "Yes, now we get rest stools, we want shorter hours on that. But we all want something we haven't got, don't we?"

THE VOICE OF THE SHOP GIRL

"Stools to sit on? Honey, we got 'em, but we don't have time to sit."

This was the answer to an inquisitive shopper who noised about the Asheville stores where girl clerks are employed, to ascertain if the stores are living up to the state law for the provision of stools behind the counters for girls to rest upon when not engaged with a customer.

With one or two exceptions, all stores meet the requirements. One shop was found where the clerks have no rest stools, and they work until 11 o'clock on Saturday nights.

Shorter hours all are mildly clamoring for. Hardly any of the girls failed to lift their voices on this subject, in one way or another.

Satisfaction, however, showed on the countenance of most of the girls. They have a good deal of fun among themselves at the expense of their customers too. It was a hot day when the visitor called. "And can you beat it?" a girl in one of the stores told her. "We've sold six winter coats today. Yes, they tried them on." Later in the conversation she said, "I have to work till 10 on Saturday nights, and I think sometimes I will drop, but I got a good boss, I been with him eight years."

One pretty blonde girl grew confidential in this manner. "Yes, ma'am, I'm satisfied, like my work and I'm treated right." After a little hesitation, she continued, "I'll tell you how it is. A lot depends on yourself. If you're nice to people they're going to be nice to you. Of course now, there's

Leading Lady of Pack Players—Miss Blanche Wilcox Goes Shopping

MISS WILCOX found the Ivory and Blue Shop a most ideal place—and her interest was such that she almost decided to stay there. Here we see her (seated in the center of the front group) inspecting one of Mr. A. L. Price's choicest garments.

"I fell right in love with that cutting little Ivory and Blue shop—and I don't call it 'little' because it's small either, but—oh, well, just women's best reason. BECAUSE—and you know that is a very modern establishment in a town of this size that I was exceedingly surprised—although from what I have learned of Asheville enterprise I should have been prepared for anything. Everything in this shop breathes prestige. Styles are those one sees in the larger cities, and the selection of garments is very fine—the thing impressing me most being the fact that but ONE of everything is the rule. No chance to see your frock dancing down the street ahead

MISS WILCOX had so much fun visiting the Asheville Paint Company that the photographer was unable to snap her as she tested the famous Biltmore Floor Wax. The smile is typically Wilcox.

"Some folks think that being an actress is no fun at all—just a continuous round of tireless travel and hard rehearsal. In addition to performances, and these may be surprised to see me polishing a floor. However, I am one who believes in simply being myself, and when I was told of the Biltmore Floor wax, I just simply had to see for myself."

"The Asheville Paint Company was very interesting to me—they handle

At the SUSQUEHANNA FURNITURE STORE—MISS WILCOX particularly enjoyed her visit to this modern store. Here we see her testing the comfort qualities of one of the Susquehanna's overstuffed chairs.

"I have always had a hankering for one of these great, deep and comfortable chairs that look as tempting as one sees them in the furniture window. As the first thing I did when I entered the Susquehanna Furniture Store was to make a baseline for me and sit me down in it. It certainly is a comfortable piece of furniture, and I decided to get me a complete suite for

MY home—just as soon as I get it. I saw so many pretty pieces at the Susquehanna—I just wanted to try one of them. I have a wonderful lot of furniture, so many varieties in the matter of style and finish from which to select. One could furnish any kind of a room just exactly like it should be with furniture from the store. I inquired the price of several things, and I was very much surprised, as I had confidently expected that such beautiful things would be priced way out of sight—but these were not, even though they should have been bargains at even higher prices. I should settle down here in the 'Land of the Sky'—I would be one of the Susquehanna's best customers."

THE WELL FROG

REMEMBER the problem in the old arithmetic about the well frog—how many leaps it will take him to get out if he jumps up four feet and slips back two and a half of every jump? Some folks are like the well frog. They save quite a bit, then a risky investment comes along, or an ardent desire for a bright bauble, and they slide back. When you feel yourself slipping take a firmer grip on your pass book and fix your eye on the Grand Prize.
