In the Corset Department

Milady's thoughts are now on Fall Clothing. And while she gives thought to this important subject she should not forget that her Suit or Dress will fit better and look better if she first has us fit her with a new Fall Corset, now in stock for her individual figure.

We extend a cordial invitation for Milady to talk over the matter of a Corset with one of our expert corsetiers. (Third Floor)

THERE'S music in the words, "New Things for Fall." They carry a broad meaning and herald the changing of the Summer things, of which we have now grown tired, for new and fresh things for wear during new and cooler days.

The question of new clothes is often perplexing, but who cares now when there is such an array of fine new things for this Fall. And if one doesn't care to buy Tailored Garments there is any amount of Silk and Woolen Dress Goods with a profusion of Trimmings to make hand sewed clothing all the more appealing.

And everything is so attractive this season. There's not one of the many accessories that is not absolutely captivating. In fact the Fall of 1922 is proving one of the greatest seasons the fashion world has known, and this store is now representative of the highest class of Dame Fashion's merchandise.

In the Department of Ready-to-Wear

Ready-to-Wear for the Fall of 1922 embraces a wide variety of materials, colors, styles and designs and the season's fashions are, with all the changes, very attractive. In our Ready-to-Wear Department Fall Fashions are portrayed on every side. Coats, Suits and Dresses of every description are here from which you may select your fall wardrobe. These are the prices:

- Coats $25 to $175
- Suits $29.50 to $150
- Dresses $22.50 to $150

(Second Floor)

Fall Fashion's Fancies

Skirts long, draped to one side, narrow about the ankles; waists bloused over wide or narrow belts which circle the hips; brilliant colors in embroideries, stitchings and beaded designs—these are the distinguishing features of the autumn fashions in dresses and suits.

The Russian influence is more noticeable than ever, as the fall season gets under way. Not only are the bright Russian colors seen in the trimmings but the trend toward the Russian blouse, with its side closing and its wide band at the hip line, is distinctly shown.

Afternoon Dresses

In dresses for afternoon and evening the favored material is crepe, the flat crepes and also the satin-backed, with the shiny side out. Jacquarded silks, brocades and brocaded velvets are much used. The dresses are usually draped, sometimes caught up at one side, sometimes at both. Many of them fall simply from the shoulder, with loose panels or draperies on each side, from the low waistline, these draperies falling to the floor. Cascades sometimes fall at one side of the skirt and the opposite side of the blouse.

Fancy belts of beads or metal form the chief ornament of some of the dresses, while others with the simplest of waists have skirts richly embroidered or beaded.

Sometimes the low belt possesses a fancy ornament or ribbon shirring in bright colors directly in the front.

Metallic laces are popular for evening gowns and the Parisian metal cloth is also much used. Black continues to hold its popularity, but it is usually the background for brilliant effects in beading and embroidery. Beaded veils are shown, sometimes with the beads forming a Paisley design. There are also beaded veils.

The skirts of the evening and afternoon gowns fall to within four inches of the floor and are draped so that they are as narrow as possible about the ankles. The uneven hem line is favored.

The bateau neck line continues to lead in popularity, although the round neck is much used and the square neck is seen occasionally. Sleeves range from none at all to cascades which fall to the floor. All sleeves are wide and flowing and usually lavishly trimmed in beads or embroidery, as the skirt is.

Coats

Cloth coats carry much fur trimming as well as bright embroideries and fancy metallic belts. Combinations of plain and fancy materials are seen. Except, of course, these simple sports models, the coats are wrappy and luxurious in style, with wide armholes and large shawl collars and deep cuffs.

It's a Dress Trimming Season In the World of Fashion and It's a Trimming Season in the Bon Marche Dress Trimming Section.
