

WITH STATE TRANS-PASS IN TUESDAY

World War Service Men's Participation Adds to Impressive.

That the reunion was such a success, as admitted by the commanding officers and by the veterans themselves, has been due, the general committee points out, to the generosity of Asheville citizens...

Gathering upon the Courthouse lawn at 10 o'clock, the Veterans formed ranks under command of the several Brigade leaders. At the order to march, the Brigade officers moved their men to the lower part of College Street...

With General Julian S. Carr, Commanding the United Confederate Veterans taking the lead, Brigadier General J. M. Ray, of Asheville, Commanding the Fourth Brigade, there followed a mile formed of more than 100 cars bearing Veterans, Brigade Commanders, Special Staffs, officials of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, World War Veterans and others.

Riding in the car of the Commander-in-Chief was little Miss Elizabeth Henderson, dressed in material made in imitation of the Confederate uniform. The little lady, daughter of Mrs. Ellis W. Henderson, President of the United States Chapter Children of the Confederacy, and known as mascot of the Mecklenburg Camp of Veterans, attracted much attention as she doffed her regulating cap and waved her hand as the parade passed by.

A noteworthy addition to the parade was found in the participation of Commodore T. P. Johnson, of Salisbury, representing the Confederate Navy and with him Commander Guider, son of Mrs. James M. Guider, Jr., Vice-Chairman of the Committee as representing the U. S. Navy.

Thanks to able handling by the parade marshals, cooperation of the police and to that of the Asheville Power and Light Company which permitted the disruption of street car service during the time of the parade, everything moved like clock-work as the long procession filed past.

Whether or not the Gray ranks will form again in a State Reunion next year has not been decided definitely. Some feel that the scattered lines will scarcely make it feasible as the number shows here and there a familiar face, gray and grizzled, gone from the dwindling number of thoughtless 'warhorses' and tents' as had some other places when considering the possibility of entertaining the veterans.

Bullet Torn Flag Carried In War By Cane Creek Riflemen Has Place In Veterans Parade

By PAT RICHARDS. Shell-torn and battle scarred, an old Confederate flag proudly billowing in the breeze drew the attention of many as the Gray Veterans swept by in parade yesterday.

Almost a mass of bullet holes, many patches kept it from falling apart, but still clearly readable in unadorned gold braid on the red background was the legend "C. S. A." and beneath a bugle done in gold.

That was the old flag of Company H, 25th N. C. Regiment. But those who are left of Company H are few and scattered, and few were in the crowds who knew that the flag with its many scars bearing mute testimony to long and honorable service was one of Buncombe County's own flags, under which native sons fought and died.

It remained for Col. S. M. Featherstone, of Company A, in the 25th, to tell the story. At the outbreak of the war, the countryside gathered at the Black place, near the old Brick Church, this side of Fletcher, at a big barbecue. Here was organized Company H.

Encamped by the wharves on the river at Plymouth, on the Eastern North Carolina coast, General "Bob" and his brigade were besieged by federal gunboats. On the wharves were several hundred barrels of turpentine, waiting to be shipped. General "Bob" directed his men to knock the heads out of the barrels and let the turpentine pour into the river.

After the last barrel was emptied a blazing torch was pitched into the stream. The fire raged on up to the mile or more out into the ocean, and the gunboats barely saved themselves. While encamped at Plymouth the Georgia Regiment earned the name of the "Turpentine Regiment."

Those Cane Creekers carried the flag triumphant through more than 20 major engagements, including Seven Pines, Richmond and Fredericksburg, and through skirmishes daily. In 1862, when the company flags were discontinued and only regimental flags borne, it was carefully wrapped and returned to this city. Had it gone on through the war doubled and trebled, it would have been no flag to float in the parade yesterday.

When the company was organized, Henry Rutledge, 16-year-old cadet, was elected major and chosen as drill master because of his military training. T. L. Clingman was elected colonel and E. E. Darlen Lieutenant-Colonel. Later Clingman was promoted to generalship and was Darlen's while Rutledge at the age of 18 stepped into a colonelcy.

WIFE AND CHILD SOB AS JENKINS GIVEN SENTENCE

Man Testifies Effort Made to Rid Defendant of Woman's Company.

(Special Correspondent The Asheville Citizen) GREENSBORO, Sept. 28.—S. L. Jenkins, aged 45, Winston-Salem attorney, who married Miss Webb, four children, today pleaded guilty in Guilford Superior Court here to a charge of practicing immorality with Minnie Jones, alias Margaret Smith, alias Mrs. C. E. Webb, and was sentenced to two years in the county jail to be assigned to the county roads.

The sentence was confirmation of a two-year sentence given Jenkins in Municipal Court here on September 29 on the same charge, from which he appealed. He lost no time in pleading guilty when arranged in company with the evidence was soon presented. When sentence was pronounced Mrs. Jenkins began to weep. The Jones woman, who was pretty in a petite way, left the room with J. C. Gold, of Tillery, Halifax County, who has had her under his protection since September 17. He stated that he is a representative of the Ku Klux Klan.

The case was the aftermath of a kidnapping near Taylorsville on the night of September 14, when a man who Minnie Jones says was her husband, was taken away from his automobile, and she was beaten by six masked men. Gold testified today that interesting himself in the case, when Jenkins got in touch with him a few days later, Jenkins tried to get him to beat the woman again, in order to rid himself of her. He took the woman from Jenkins, Gold said, and had him arrested and brought here.

Other evidence was presented by Minnie Jones, who told of going to the Klan room here, where she said they lived as Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Webb, at the home of Rev. H. O. Nash, of Taylorsville and by Mrs. Nash, who identified Jenkins as "Webb." Jenkins' wife and child were in court and sobbed when the sentence was imposed. The defendant on his way from the court room to his cell, stopped to kiss his wife. Later she consoled him in the jail. Margaret Smith left the court room immediately after the verdict.

DEPOSED KLEAGLE HELD TO GRAND JURY BY COURT

Guerrard Is Released From Appearance in the Swain County Court.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT) RALEIGH, Sept. 28.—W. N. Guerrard, deposed King Kleagle of the Ku Klux Klan in North Carolina, was released from appearance in Bryson City, Swain County, for trial on charges of embezzling $17,000 of Klan funds as the result of habeas corpus proceedings before Superior Court Judge Lyon this afternoon. He was held under $5,000 bond for a possible grand jury investigation in Wake County, however.

The hearing centered on the direct charges against Guerrard and very little inside Klan gossip leaked out, despite a battery of questions, leveled at the State's witnesses by J. W. Bailey, attorney for the deposed Kleagle. These witnesses were L. L. Fronberger, who until recently was Klan organizer at Asheville, and Dr. W. B. Thompson, "personal representative of the Imperial Wizard" who came into this State to take charge of the order with the dismissal of Guerrard.

It was revealed that the Klan had 446 members in Asheville and 57 in Bryson City. Fronberger testified he had paid Guerrard $500 a month for the past year and the State charged the Kleagle had reported only 36 members in Asheville and 17 in Bryson City.

Mr. Bailey tried hard to find out the condition of the Klan in the State but all Dr. Thompson would tell him was that "it is good." Mr. Bailey was surprised that Dr. Thompson had not read the news articles in the mountain county where Grand Dragon, Bruce Craven, but the personal representative of the Imperial Wizard had not so much as heard of the gentleman. Newspaper criticism the country over had a reaction favorable to the Klan, said Thompson in refuting Guerrard's claim of using $3,500 as salary during the period of "extreme mental anguish."

The court did not concern itself with the differences in the reports on the Bryson City and Asheville memberships since it was revealed that the transfer of money of these was made by mail and Guerrard received the money in Raleigh. That would make the alleged offense one occurring in Raleigh, and not in the mountain county, where the warrant was issued last week by N. E. Littlejohn, the Klan's detective.

The order releasing him from the Bryson City warrant held him for the Wake Grand Jury. A sensation had been promised when internal affairs of the Klan in North Carolina should get a court airing, but the court hearing was calm. Guerrard was confident after court that the action of the Klan against him had stopped, while the prosecutors, of whom Dr. Thompson was the chief, were reported as expecting to issue warrants in Franklin and other counties.

Guerrard came into the State to take charge of Klan affairs in 1920. He hired a great many Kleagles, of whom Fronberger was the most prominent. Fronberger was engaged in Charlotte in June, 1920, and was organizing Kleagle until last February, he testified. He had cancelled checks showing where he had paid Guerrard $36 the member, he himself keeping $4. Guerrard was to get a dollar a member and allowances for expenses, making remittances of his treasury balance to Atlanta. The deposed Kleagle is alleged to have failed to turn over some $17,000 to Atlanta. In addition to a statement, giving himself $2,300 for salary during the "mental anguish" period, allowances for rent, travel and other expenses totaling $8,000. It was declared that many Kleagles had held back payments on membership initiation fees, and dues.
