many Frenchmen thought it is his bit of humorous irony.

One day last week this feeling erotted out noticeably among the several thousand people outside the Palais Bourbon at a time when the Chamber was discussing the bill. A former Cabinet member, looking over the throng which had assembled in a strange belief that the wrangle over the bill might lead to the fall of the Poincare Cabinet, shrugged his shoulcare Cabinet, shrugged his shoulders and said:

"These people outside are only little profiteers; all of the big ones are on the inside sitting on the Deputies' bennes."
