Preaching And Politics

There are too many 50-per-cent. Christians the land, the kind who think they can combine fidelity to God with treachery to country. A church weekly. The Christian Observer, holds the same opinion. In its current hade it says ditorially: 13 1

While the Christian Churches as organizations have no place in partisan poli-tics, and while no church court should overstep the line of separation between Church and State, yet Christian people as individuals have an emphatic moral duty to discharge in connection with the election. When they have satisfied themselves that a certain course of conduct in regard to the political questions before the country is right, they should then do their full duty to their country and should not
