CAUGHT IN A COTTON-GIN.

Isham N. Holley, a young man of six-teen, son of Willis Holley, colored while pouring up cotton in the gin on Mr. Augustus Holley's plantation, accidently got his hand among the saws. The gin being run by steam its motion could not be stopped and ere anyone was his hand and forearm so badly lascerated as to require amputation. The Drs. Winborn performed the operation. Up to this writing the patient is doing well. The loss of a limb to the laboring man is by no means inconsiderable, we therefore regret this misfortune because its consequent injury is life long and irreperable. Let this, another accident among many of like character, all happening from like causes-cotton ginsbe a caution to others and lead them to labors around these instruments, which, though beneficial in themselves, can be so easily converted into means of torture and death.
