Since the legislature has declared property in dogs they are becoming the subjects of much vexed litigation. While they are poor property they often give rise to disputes which destroy even the best of friendships. The law of extermination would be the best in the vast majority of instances.

Edenton would grow in population a great deal if our citizens would only build more dwellings. Everyday we have calls from strangers desiring to settle in our midst, but unable to get houses. Citizens, stir up. Let this be no longer the difficulty. Build and accommodate those wishing to come here.

Excellent schools, fire society, eight churches, representing seven different denominations of christians, two unsurpassed hotels, any number of merchants, a fine climate, five doctors and three undertakers constantly without a job, if our town does not swell the number of its inhabitants it will be because the people will not prepare for the incomers who are seeking just such a home or location as is here found.
