Ideal Life of the Coffee Planter.

"Coffee planters in Guatemala have a double way of making money," said Carl F. Ebberle, of Philadelphia, at the National. "In the first place they have all grown rich during recent years because of the high price of the bean and the decline of the Brazilian coffee plantations upon the abolition of the monarchy. A very great impetus was given to coffee culture in Central America, and now there is very little good coffee land in Guatemala that is not cultivated, but there is plenty of land in Nicaragua.

"It costs about nine or ten cents per pound to land coffee in the New York, London or Amsterdam markets. When it sells from fifteen to thirty cents the enormous profit is plain. The rich planters spend their winters in Paris or London. There are millions of German capital invested in coffee, and the Germans practically control the trade. American interests are small. In all large cities in Mexico and Central America are seen big German commission houses and retail stores.

"The coffee planters are paid for their product in gold. They pay their hands and other expenses on their plantations in silver. As their own silver money is worth about sixty-four cents on the dollar it is easy to see what it means to them when exchange is thirty-six cents. The life of a coffee planter is an ideal one when once established, for the plantations are at an elevation usually of over 3000 feet above the sea in the mountains and the climate is delightful. The profits from large plantations, and most of them are good sized, are princely and the planters are enabled to travel where they will, for people will drink coffee and as long as the trees are kept in bearing the return is certain. It takes large capital, however, to embark in the business, since you must expend large sums and wait four years before there is a substantial return."—Washington Star.

The New Bread.

Attention is called to the new method of making bread of superior lightness, fineness and wholesomeness without yeast, a receipt for which is given elsewhere in this paper. Rapid Driving.

Madame de Ujfalvy-Burton, describing her travels in Western Siberia, says that for a part of the way she and her husband drove from town to town with horses hired from the Cossacks. They were fine horses and traveled with frightful rapidity. Generally they were unaccustomed to be driven together. Only the middle one—the most docile—was harnessed before the time for starting. The others were not brought out until the driver was on his seat. When the manager of the station pronounced the word "Gato!"—ready—the carriage bounded forward. The horses tore madly on for fifteen or twenty minutes, and it was hard to tell whether they or the driver had the mastery.

On the plain it was a magnificent drive. When the horses were well started the driver let the reins hang loose and they kept up a fine pace. The driver had them well in hand and there was no danger. He calmed and guided them with wonderful skill. Honor to the Russian coachman. Only once were we in great peril. We had just left a station near the Irish River. The road was near the precipitous river bank. Our horses started at a mad pace and the driver could not control them. They galloped straight toward the precipice that a turn in the road brought just ahead of us. I thought we were lost. M. de Ujfalvy stood on the carriage steps, revolver in hand, ready to shoot the middle horse, hoping that if he fell dead the others would halt. Some Cossacks who saw the danger rushed to us shouting, "Don't fire." One of them grasped the bridle of the middle horse and by an almost superhuman effort stopped him. It was time. We could look down into the abyss.—Manchester Times.
