

Sunday Thoughts.

[From the Ram's Horn.] The corner of all sin is unbelief. We punish ourselves when we hate our people. A hypocrite never fools anybody but himself. No man is pure who is not filled with love of purity. That man has an easy place who loves to do God's will. A civil tongue will protect us where a revolver wouldn't. God can use a weak man, but he has no use for a lazy one. We can not do our best for a cause we are not sure is right. If salvation did not depend upon love, it could not be eternal. The faultfinder works at least ten hours a day for the devil for nothing. The joy of the Lord is the strength of the righteous. Have you got it? It means something when a cheerful giver puts his hand in his pocket. When we are doing right it is always safe to count on God for lots of help.

WISE WORDS.

A bird doesn't sing by note. Friendship is love disinfected. Love is a spray of forget-me-nots. Babies are subbeams with clothes on. There are volumes in a woman's eyes. Learn to explain thy doctrine by thy life. Kindness out of season destroys power. An ounce of action is worth a pound of talk. Happiness doesn't always ride in a carriage. Blessed are the sorrowful who carry a cheery face. Fine manners need the support of fine manners in others. A soul occupied with great ideas best performs small duties. In this world it is not what we take up, but what we give up that makes us rich. To speak out and to offend, with some people, are but one and the same thing. There are three supreme agonies in life: the agony of jealousy, the agony of fearing you have mistaken your talents, and the agony of enmity. "God bless you," is the old-fashioned summing up of sincere affection, without the least smirk of studied civility. In men of the highest character and noblest genius there generally exists insatiable desire of honor, command, power, and glory. There is no beautifier of complexion, or form, or behavior, like the wish to scatter joy and not pain around us.

Spain Has Apologised.

Spain has apologized for firing on the Alliance off Cape Maysi, Cuba. The occurrence is regretted by them and they have taken measures to present a repitition of the act. The demands of the government have been complied with.

COL. JULIAN S. CARR'S FARM.

WHAT MONEY WILL DO ON NORTH CAROLINA SOIL. [Charlotte News and Courier.] The attractions of Oconeechee are too numerous to mention in detail. Blooded horses, Jersey cattle, Essex and Duroc, Jersey hogs, Shropshire and horned Dorset sheep, fine turkeys, peafowls, ducks, geese and pigeons, Italian bees, etc. The farm is 750 acres in extent and is under a splendid system of cultivation. The horse and cow barns are the finest in the State, costing $23,000 and $8,000 respectively. These are fitted up with the latest improvements. The residence is the old Norwood house, built during colonial times, and although it has been beautifully remodeled it still retains its colonial style. Cornwallis cut the road that passes in front of the house. The old clock, sent as a present to the town of Hillsboro, by King George III, can be plainly seen from the farm. Col. Carr has spared no pains or money in beautifying this naturally very attractive farm. His club house is something especially to be admired. This, with the many other buildings, makes one appreciate Col. Carr's artistic tastes, and feel that he has indeed an eye for the beautiful. The Oconeechee mountain is to be seen across the road, and the beautiful little river Eno runs through the farm, affording good fishing and fine bathing. There is a high bluff north of the house where the river runs around the foot of the mountain, and standing out on this bluff in bold relief is an immense rock called "lover's Leap," romantic from the fact that from its lofty top a beautiful girl committed suicide, all for sweet love's sake.

CLOTHING FOR THE HEATHEN

The Sunday School Magazine gives the following: About a year ago the ladies of a certain Dorcas Society made up a large quantity of shirts, trousers and socks, and boxed them up and sent them to a mission station on the west coast of Africa. A man named Ridley went out with the boxes, and stayed in Africa several months. When he returned, the Dorcas Society of course was anxious to hear how his donation was received, and Ridley, one evening, met the members and told them about it in a little speech. He said, "Well, you know, we got the clothes out there all right, and after a while we distributed them among some of the natives in the neighborhood. We thought maybe it would attract them to the mission, but it didn't, and after some time had elapsed, and not a native came to church with those clothes on, I went out on an exploring expedition to find out about it. It seems that on the first day after the goods were distributed one of the chiefs attempted to mount a shirt. He didn't exactly understand it, and he pushed his legs through the arms and gathered the tail up around his waist. He couldn't make it stand up, however, and they say he went around inquiring in his native tongue what kind of an idiot it was that constructed a garment that wouldn't hang on, and swearing some of the most awful heathen oaths. At last he let it drag, and that night he got his legs tangled in it somehow, and fell over a precipice and was killed. "Another chief who got one on properly went paddling around in the dark, and the people imagining he was a ghost, sacrificed four babies to keep off the evil spirit. "And then you know those trousers you sent out? Well, they fitted one pair on an idol, and then they stuffed most of the rest with leaves and set them up as a kind of new-fashioned idols, and began to worship them. They say that the services were very impressive. Some of the women split a few pairs in half, and after sewing up the legs used them to carry yams in, and I saw one chief with a corduroy leg on his head as a kind of helmet. "I think though the socks were most popular. All the fighting men went for them the first thing. They filled them with sand and used them as boomerangs and warclubs. I learned that they were so much pleased with the efficiency of those socks that they made a raid on a neighboring tribe on purpose to try them, and they say they knocked about eighty women and children on the head before they came home. They asked me if I wouldn't speak to you and get you to send out a few barrels more, and to make them a little stronger, so they'd last longer, and I said I would. "This society's doing a power of good to those heathen, and I've no doubt if you keep right along with the work you will inaugurate a general war all over the continent of Africa, and give everybody an idol of his own. All they want is enough socks and trousers. I'll take them when I go out again. Then the Dorcas passed a resolution declaring that it would, perhaps, be better to let the heathen go naked and give the clothes to the poor at home. Maybe that is the better way.

Words of Truth.

Successful advertising requires brain and good judgment and strong common sense. Thousands of dollars are thrown away every day in injudicious advertising. So says one of our contemporaries, and yet are not disposed to contradict him. Not that it requires genius to advertise judiciously. On the contrary the best equipment for an advertiser is to have something good to advertise, and then to make it known in a plain unmistakable manner, and keep on making the public familiar with it, until success is insured. It does not matter whether he has goods for sale or work to perform or a trade journal to circulate, the requisites for successful advertising are the same, and the first is to offer something good to the public. And the next is to keep on making it known until you have secured the attention of the public, and mind never to drop off unless you want to be forgotten and have to do some of your work over again. It is easier to underdo than overdo advertising. The experience of advertisers in all times has been that constancy in advertising is absolutely indispensable. —Ex.
