 Mr. Richard G. Carter, a farmer who lived near Edenton on Pendroke farm, and who usually came to town nearly every morning to sell vegetables, etc., came over yesterday morning about 7 o'clock, accompanied by his little boy. On reaching the corner of Water and Broad streets he complained to some gentlemen standing thereby that he was feeling quite bad. He sat his basket of vegetables down and took a seat in a chair. In a few minutes thereafter he was seen to fall helplessly to the ground. Messrs. T. P. Jones and B. F. Francis immediately went to his assistance and dispatched a messenger for a doctor, but he expired before the physician could reach him. He was then taken to the undertaking establishment of L. F. Ziegler, where he was shrouded and placed into a neat coffin. At noon, his remains were taken to Winton, his old home, by Mr. J. E. Jones, where they will be interred.
