FOR BENEDICTS.

No Others Must Read the Article Below. BECAUSE IT CONTAINS ADVICE TO THOSE MEN WHO HAVE JUST COME INTO THE RIGHTS OF A HUSBAND. You now, no doubt, consider yourself the happiest of men, and you have reason to think yourself so. You have obtained that for which you have been seeking. It has been an object of your pursuit to find someone worthy of your affections and calculated to increase your happiness. You have found the prize, she has left her home, her family and friends, to share in your pleasures and sorrows. She has given to you her whole heart. On you now rests much, most of her happiness. As the vine twining around the majestic oak makes it a far more interesting object, while at the same time it acknowledges its superior height and strength, so is the love of woman. Meek and confiding, she leans on him she has chosen for a companion. She looks to him as a protector. She expects from him sympathy. Oh! if there is ought that is pure and heavenly on earth it is this sacred union of souls, this affection which knows no desire beyond the happiness of each other—no wish nor pleasure that both cannot share. But in proportion as these feelings are ardent, these affections are pure and holy, so are they delicate and sensible to neglect. The heart that is barren of affections feels an unkind word, but that which is full of a glowing love an unkind word will wound. Bear this, then, constantly in mind: if you wish to keep the affections of your wife, she has her heart, she has your whole heart. True affection cannot be gained for nothing. Friendship which truly deserves the name is not caught with a golden bait, nor held with one sunny smile. Love and love only is the law for love.

Most young families possess warm affections and grow but little on love and its realities. They expect when they marry to be in a state of perfect happiness. They think of care or responsibility. They think only of being with one whom they love above all others. Shall this fond expectation be disappointed? Shall this devoted heart be crushed with all these bright hopes clustering thick about it? Ah, no! It is the duty of the husband with a kind and gentle hand to temper, rather than with a cold hand to chill them. He must never allow that vulgar expression to prove true—"Courtship and marriage are very different things." They should not be different. You may, and you ought to, show to your wife all these endearing attentions which first attracted and fixed on you her affections. Never let her feel the difference between a lover and a husband, or rather be as much a lover after marriage as before. It is often said that man is an active, restless being, full of excitement and pleased with all that is new. But if he is this he is also a social and domestic being. You are actively engaged in business, and while you are so, are contented. You mix much in society, enter into public affairs of interest, and join with others in the familiar discussion on the topics of the day. But are you satisfied with these? Will these, and these alone make you happy? They cannot. When the day is over, with its bustle and cares is over, you return to your own quiet fireside. And then you desire to meet one on whom much of your happiness depends. Do you wish your step to give her pleasure. Would you have her welcome you with smiles and receive from her kind words? Do you same by her. Do you wish your family well arranged? Are you desirous that prudence, order, neatness and good taste should make his several parts? Make these cares a pleasure to her, by being yourself pleased when you see them well performed. She will, if before deficient, gradually acquire a habit of attention and consideration, as indeed they are eminently her sphere of duty. When you choose a wife you did not probably think her handsomer than any other, or more learned than any other, or entirely better than any other. But you thought she possessed that union of qualities, that "happy medium" which was best calculated to make you happy. Never fear to let her be sensible of this. Never let the fear of jokes or smiles prevent your showing, in the presence of others, that your wife is more to you than all others. A foolish fondness, an affected politeness, is indeed almost disgusting as we sometimes see it displayed by married people. And it is often to your mind an indication of a want rather than an overplus of affection. But there is a politeness that springs from the heart, there are attentions which a true interest and affection prompt, and these should never be neglected. Oh, tell it not in Christendom that your affections are not inviolable. Common consent and the providence of God has made the husband superior to the wife. But it is not necessary to assert this superiority. If done, it tends to lessen the affection of both. If your wife has the proper views and feelings she will show sufficient deference to your opinion without being reminded of it. It is the distinguished mark of civilized society, it is a peculiar excellence of Christianity, that women is made the companion, not the slave and dependent of man. The time is gone by when women were thought to have no souls. In physical strength and active labor they must yield, but they may, and often do, possess as much firmness of mind and strength of purpose as the other sex.

In order, then, to make your wife happy, yourself so, and your home pleasant to both, follow the dictates of duty and affection. Then she will have no desire to seek pleasure abroad. She will not desire the admiration of others if she has your confidence. She will be ready to give up the allurements of gaiety and fashion, for the more endearing pleasures of quiet domestic happiness. Nothing in life is so pure and devoted as woman's love. It matters not whether it be exerted for husband or child, sister or brother, it is the same pure unquenchable flame, the same constant and immaculate glow of feeling, whose most proper food is misfortune, and whose undeniable touchstone is trial, where true friendship is tested and proved. Do but give her one token of love, one kind word or gentle look, even if it be amid desolation and death, the feelings of that faithful heart will gush forth as a torrent, in despite of every earthly bond or mercenary tie. More priceless than the gems of Golconda is a virgin's heart, and more devoted than the idolatry of Mexico is a woman's love. It is a principle and characteristic of her nature, a faculty and infatuation which absorbs and concentrates all the fervor of her soul and the depths of her bosom. There is more thrilling felicity derived from a union of true, guileless and uncontrived hearts than all the conquests of Alexander or Napoleon, the wisdom of Socrates or the wealth of Croesus. —Berkley (Va.) Graphic.

SHERIFF SCOTT GOT HIS MAN

But he Was Filled With Holes And Only fit for The Coroner. Near Goldsboro Sunday afternoon an escaped prisoner from Wayne county jail, named Bunn, was killed by Sheriff Scott. The sheriff's people had been hunting Bunn several weeks. The sheriff was returning from church in the country when he met Bunn in a road cart with his wife. The sheriff called to him to surrender. Bunn made no reply but from the bottom of the cart drew a double-barrelled gun which he levelled at the sheriff. Before he could fire the sheriff fired three times in rapid succession. Bunn fell from the cart dead. The ball took effect at the base of the spine. Bunn's wife was uninjured. The sentiment is that the sheriff was justified. Bunn was known to be a desperate man.

Points About Thanksgiving.

The first general Thanksgiving Day was observed in Massachusetts. There had been a long, hard winter, one of great severity and suffering. There was not only famine, but disease. A vessel had been sent out for provisions. Day after day passed and it did not return. On the very day appointed for fasting and prayer, in came the ship. The day was in 1631. Thereafter it became an annual observance.

Whence came the custom of eating turkey at Thanksgiving? It is related that on one of the Thanksgiving Days in New England, the corn and barley having yielded a rich return, four hunters were sent out to procure wild fowl to mingle with the grain in the feast. They returned with an abundance of turkeys. Thereafter turkey became the Thanksgiving fowl.

For many years the people had observed an annual day of Thanksgiving, but "the first national Thanksgiving proclamation was issued by President Washington, dated at the city of New York, the third day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-nine." The day recommended for this service was November 26, 1789.

The first Thanksgiving was observed in the month of September. It was President Lincoln who set the time definitely for the last Thursday in November. Since that time it has always been a fixed day.—Ex.

How to Succeed.

"D. R. Walker," writing of the success of the Rocky Mount Fair, says of its President: Hon. B. H. Bunn says that Jesse Brake's success in life has been brought about by paying his way as he went. He has for twenty years made it a rule whenever coming to town to bring something to sell, and "I always make the load which I bring to town worth more than the load I carry back home," has been his motto.

It is the looking well after the small things in life that tells in every calling. Jesse Brake has succeeded in farming better than many of his neighbors because he has carried more things to town than he brought away. There are other farmers like him. Their experience ought to be an object lesson to their neighbors. Before you start out shopping be sure and consult the columns of this paper, which will tell you the house that offer the best bargains in all lines of goods. Tell the merchants that you read their advertisements in this paper. The soft, rich, glossy sheen, so much admired in hair, can be secured by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. ## MURDERED AND ROBBED.

A WELL-KNOWN CITIZEN OF AURORA, KILLED AND THROWN AMONG WEEDS. Saturday night at 8 o'clock on one of the principal streets of Aurora, Beaufort county, N. C., about forty yards from J. W. Chapin's gate, and the same distance from his own, some one shot down John B. Bonner killing him, it is supposed, instantly, but he was not found until Sunday morning about sun-up. He was shot in the left side, the ball passing through the body. The other shot was in the forehead, making a wound as large as a silver dollar. He was picked up and thrown over the fence in the weeds.

He is a man with a host of friends and the shock to the community is great. There is no suspicion on any yet. Blood-hounds have been sent for and everything will be done to catch the guilty parties. Tracks were found leading from the body towards the creek. Everything valuable was taken from the body with the exception of a ring. Mr. Bonner was engaged in the banking and brokerage business and was a vestryman in the Episcopal Church. He was worth considerable property and did much for the advancement of his part of the country. He leaves nine children. This is the second murder to occur in that part of the country this year, beside "Judge Lynch" visited there last Christmas. Considerable excitement is aroused and if the guilty ones are apprehended serious consequences may be the result. LATER—The murderers have been caught—four white men. Dave Credle was the first taken, who turned states evidence and implicated one Brandly and Sherrell and Uriah Bell. All four have been arrested and placed in jail at Washington, N. C.

Newbern Cat-Fish Dis-guised as Salmon.

[Nowitzky's Monthly.] Visitor standing on the wharf, watching fisherman unload his boat, speaks: "I see that you are carefully putting away those cat-fish: I thought people didn't eat them down here." Fisherman—"They don't in their natural state; they wait until we ship them North, where they are canned for salmon, when they smack their lips over them, thinking they are eating the best Kennebec River."

Mollie's Little Ram.

Mollie had a little ram as black as a rubber shoe, and everywhere that Mollie went he emigrated too. He went with her to church one day, the folks hilarious grew, to see him walk demurely into Deacon Allen's pew. The worthy deacon quickly let his angry passion rise and gave it an unchristian kick between the sad brown eyes. This landed rammy in the aisle; the deacon followed fast, and raised his foot again, alas! that first kick was his last. For Mr. Sheep walked slowly back, about a rod 'tis said, and ere the deacon could retract, he stood him on his head. The congregation all arose and went for that 'ere sheep; several well directed butts just placed them in a heap. Then rushed they straightway for the door, grumbling long and loud, while rammy struck the hindmost man, and shoved him through the crowd. The minister had often heard that kindness would subdue the fiercest beast. "Ahha," he said, "I'll try that little game on you." And so he kindly, gently called: "Come rammy, rammy, ram, to see the folks abuse you so, I grieved and sorry am." The ram quite dropped his humble air, and dropped from off his feet and when the parson anked, he was in the hindmost seat. And as he shot out of the door and closed it with a slam, he named a California town, I think 'twas Yuba Dam.—Ex.

Truth in This.

The Rocky Mount Argonaut truthfully says, "the business man who thinks he can do business without advertising shows a lamentable lack of judgment. In this year of our Lord 1895, people who have money to spend read the newspapers, and instead of going around the street hunting for what they need, take up their paper and soon find where they are kept. The man who advertises and does it in a business-like manner will in the end come out ahead of his neighbor who thinks the world ought to hunt him up to find out his business. If you want people's trade you should invite them to come to see you."

Punished For Eating Onions.

Miss Foster, a school teacher of Pecatonica, Illinois, severely whipped a pupil recently because the odor of onions was on his breath. The children of the school promptly rebelled against the introduction of the rod as punishment for eating onions, and all have eaten raw onions at every school-day meal since. The parents of the children have taken up the cause, and now nearly all the inhabitants of the town are eating onions.

An Unequaled Combination of Advantages.

Nature has given the South advantages unequalled by those of any other country. More than 60 per cent. of the world's cotton is raised in the South. But this cotton crop is now exceeded in value by its grain crops, which aggregate about 650,000,000 bushels a year, a fact which comparatively few seem to know. More than one-half of all the standing timber in the United States is in the South. Iron ore and coal are in unlimited supply, and owing to their proximity and to the low cost of mining, pig iron is now made at a smaller cost than in any other part of the world. Pittsburg and Chicago are now using Alabama iron for basic steel making, and soon large steel plants will be built in the South. Nearly every Southern State has an abundance of the best water power to supplement the advantages of cheap coal. It is not an exaggeration to say that this favored land has greater advantages and resources, such as mineral, timber and agricultural wealth, than all other sections; it also has greater advantages for the profitable utilization of these natural resources than any other country in the world; by virtue of its rivers and long sea coast it has the guarantee of the lowest freight rates, regardless of railroad combinations; it has a climate that is conducive to good health and long life—a climate that reduces the cost of living to a minimum; it has all of these mighty factors to insure its prosperity, and with fewer disadvantages than any other equal area in America or Europe. It can produce everything, from the widest range of agricultural growth to the widest limit of manufacturing and mining diversity, at a lower cost than other sections. It is becoming the market garden of the North. In the aggregate the shipment of early fruits and vegetables North and West probably amounts to $50,000,000 a year; this business is increasing very rapidly. Ten years ago it was of trifling importance. Some countries have iron and coal, some have timber, some have good agricultural lands, some have a good climate, some have water power, some other advantages, but no other except the South combines all of these, and to them adds cotton, which, in all its ramifications, is the foundation of what is probably the greatest manufacturing interest in the world. On Monday, says the Washington Gazette, a very unfortunate accident happened to Frederick Werren, the bright and gentlemanly eleven-year old son of Capt. Chas. F. Warren. An accidental shot from little Murray Short's air gun, striking him in the right eye, caused such injury as to necessitate taking him to Baltimore for treatment. He was carried by his parents and Dr. Jno. G. Blount to Baltimore Monday night by special train. Mrs. Jno. G. Blount followed on Wednesday to be with Mrs. Warren. A telegram received after their arrival states that it was necessary to take out the eye at once. A negro who stole a cow from the editor of the Forest City Ledger was recently sent to the penitentiary for four years. If all the fellows who steal from editors were sent to the penitentiary it would be so full of them that their feet would stick out of the windows. In our twenty-odd years' experience publishing a paper we have accumulated $8,000 of subscription debts that we will take one-fourth of a cent on the dollar for. Our deliberate opinion is that the men who have defrauded us out of the just fruits of our labors are as guilty of theft in the sight of the Almighty as the negro who stole editor Green's cow. It is no consolation to think that they will not escape hell in the next world as easily as they have the penitentiary in this.—Mt. Airy News.
