KIND WORDS.
Mr. Editor:—Allow me space to speak to the public through your paper. I have been in Edenton not quite three months. I came a stranger, yet already feel attached, and deeply, to this most delightful little city. Open homes and hearts have greeted me on every hand. In hotel, in public service, and in private homes the people manifest their royal blood by numberless acts that speak of the real King—the eternal Royalty.

Soon after my family had gotten into our house, numerous friends, too modest to attach their names, express their good-will by filling our pantry with substantial tokens of remembrance. It was real remembrance in a lavish way and lingers still with sweet aroma in a home, where every one is welcome. Again at Christmas more than one remembered this same home and sent material greeting.

Edenton bears finger prints of royalty. Historic interest and honest years of worthy life are here enshrined. Christian culture lives and blossoms here. Dignity and refinement we expected here, nor were we disappointed. The professional men of Edenton have not forgotten where they live, as readily appears from their kind and courteous bearing. And the surrounding country has already shown a kind and happy hospitality that speaks well for Eastern North Carolina.

Carolina, dear old mother, everywhere we love her. Wherever we shall go, she is dear and comely. And on her open face, looking to the rising sun of the bright and beaming morning smiles and lingers. Clouds may come but they cannot stay. The old German proverb, "Die Morgensussde hot gold im Munde" hits us here. The morning hour falls with golden promise on this Eastern Carolina. The dark chasms of the last few years are closing. Fraternal feelings are growing. Virtue and christian fellowship are soon to shine afresh in the white light of a new century.

Here in Edenton, among strangers, who are already are most cherished friends, in this delightful little city, with its fragrance of a worthy past I spend the closing months of this century, made happy by these worthy people and our common Savior.
Ye century of our birth speed thee to thy long repose, and take with thee all our bickerings and failures, our strifes and sins, leaving us to face the new, with new and earnest purpose.
J. O. ALDERMAN.

The Best Plaster.
A piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound to the affected parts is superior to any plaster. When troubled with lame back or pains in the side or chest, give it a trial and you are certain to be more than pleased with the prompt relief which it affords. Pain Balm also cures rheumatism. One application gives relief. For sale by W. A. Leggett.

Have you been thinking what you are going to give your friend as a Christmas present? Have you one time thought that they would appreciate more than anything else you might offer them, if they be good and true friends, they would appreciate a perfect likeness, a good Photograph of yourself in preference to anything else you could offer them, at such little cost. Only think you can get 6 nice Pictures for one dollar, send Henry, and Tom, Jessie, and Martha, Mary, and Lucy, all one a piece and only cost a dollar. Think of this, Christmas is almost here. Edenton Art Gallery.

TYPES OF PRETTY GIRLS.
The Three Distinctive Classes that Secure Admiration.

It is in no sense to be regarded that admiration for pretty women prettily robed is either effeminate or silly. As we might be assailed who finds inspiration in the wonderfully beautiful pictures that are revealed to the enraptured vision day after day in Edenton and Hertford. A pretty woman naturally implies all that is grand in humanity and graceful in nature. She is something eminently delightful and he must be a heartless cynic who can find no pleasure in this gracious gift of the creator. All recognize three distinctive types in the pretty girls of to-day. The pretty girl, the stylish girl and the picturesque girl. When a girl is studious or intellectual she ceases to be a girl. There are a few such in the above named towns and surrounding country. They are given the more dignified title of woman. The girl who is pretty has an invincible weapon in her hands. She is taught from her infancy that she is favored above other girls, and, alas, by the law of nature's compensation, she generally grows up without an idea in her fluffly pate beyond the best pose for that same pate, and the best becoming piece of millinery with which to adorn it. She may be of the dashing, vivid style of beauty, in which case she is always insipid, and she may be neither, but merely pretty, with a good complexion, pretty eyes and pretty hair. At first glance one might suppose the pretty girl to have the best of the race, but experience proves otherwise.

The stylish girl is the one where clothes seem made for her and her alone. She will take the common place hat of her pretty sister and, placing it on her modish head, give it a pat or two which will transform it until her neighbor will swear it is imported. Her gowns may be plain and cheap, but they are worn with an indefinable air, which makes them better looking than the satins and velvets which the other woman wears with an ill grace. Everything belonging to her partakes of her individuality, until even the everyday sailor or rough straw is distinguished as it hangs on the hall rack, and the fuzzy brown cape which she dons in wet weather looks more perky and self-satisfied than its neighbor, the sealskin, which does not belong to the stylish girl. It is some vague power within her which enables her to select out of the thousand and one hats of the millinery opening the very bit of head gear which will make her the cynosure of all eyes.

Now the picturesque girl does not strike one at first sight so favorably, but she is the one who grows on you, until she seems the nicest thing in the rooms, and the best bit of beauty within sight. Her gowns always have a dreamy, poetical nature had animated their folds. There are graceful curves where another woman would have commonplace drapery. Her hair has also a soft, silken wave which suggests beauty, poetry, art, all sorts of delightful visions and her hands and feet—well these are her strong points, and if she is a wise picturesque girl she knows it and make the best of them. Standing besides a fluted pillar, with one rounded arm above her head and a faraway look in her face, she is a subject for a dream, and seated in the front porch, always with some roses tumbling out of her hair, she looks like the fairest bit of nature's handiwork the enraptured on-looker has ever gazed on. She is always delightful, for she is continually a contrast to the women about

How to Cure Croup.
Mr. R. Gray, who lives near Amenia, Dutchess county, N. Y., says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best medicine I have ever used. It is a fine children's remedy for croup and never fails to cure." When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough has developed, it will prevent the attack. This should be borne in mind and a bottle of the cough remedy kept at hand ready for instant use as soon as these symptoms appear. For sale by W. A. Leggett.

her, because there is generally only one of her in a community. Of course she has imitators, but they are always recognized as such, for their gracefully falling draperies are always untidy but the real, first-class, bona fide picture-essque girl is a thing of beauty and a joy forever, and her path is generally one of roses and sunshine all her life through.

Edenton and Hertford rejoice in the possession of all these types as may be handsomely established by any observer who cares to take a view of the girls as they appear on the promenade, in the stores or at home. It must be said that there is much to study in this respect. It is a high compliment to the girls of these towns that the majority know how to dress well. This in itself is an art, and some how the fabrics displayed this winter are something particularly attractive. The fashions, too, are impressive and both combined make a delightful adornment. Gowned in these the pretty girl becomes an object of envy among her plainer sisters and of admiration among men.

[The above was taken from the Public Ledger, of Oxford, N. C., and we publish it in full with the exception of where the word Oxford appears we have inserted the name of this town and our sister town Hertford.—Ed.]

THE MAN WHO DRINKS.
There is Less and Less Demand for Him as a Worker.

The business world recognizes that no man who drinks is as good as he would be if he never drank, says The Memphis Commercial Appeal. Time was when in certain lines of business it was considered necessary to drink. Quite the contrary is the case now. Even saloon men prefer barkeers, ers who do not drink the liquids they sell. All the fairy tales about the great influence of liquor have been exploded. The orator who must be intoxicated in order to make a speech is no longer here and has never been here. The lawyer who cannot plead a case or cite an authority without spending the night before in a bar room has gone to visit the pale glimpses of the moon and has always been gone. The writer who produces a great poem or a great essay while maudlin was removed from this planet before the command "Let there be light" was given. The book-keeper, clerk, mechanic, salesman, artisan, young or not at his best while he is under the influence of liquor, and he is not as valuable to himself, his employer, or society. In the race of life the temperate man has the best of it; the drinking man is handicapped. Great things have been done while the brain was excited with stimulants, but greater things would have been done had there been no artificial stimulation. The sober man is always an improvement on the drunken man.
