SYLVAN FAIR IS BIGGEST EVENT EVER STAGED

Over Thousand Entries in Lower Transylvania County Show

BOYD TOWNSHIP WINS THE COMMUNITY PRIZE

Three Days Will Be Set Aside Next Year for Great Showing

The biggest event ever staged in Brevard was the Sylvan fair held here last Friday and Saturday when more than 1,000 entries of all types of farm and home products, livestock and poultry were made.

Expecting the fair to be of much larger proportions than that staged last year, Professor Julian Glazener and committees from each of the township had made preparations to take care of what was looked forward to as a fine display, but were literally swamped by the magnitude of entries that came from over half the homes of the lower end of the county.

Young Tar Heel farmers and others, under the supervision of Professor Glazener had the entire lower floor of Brevard high school prepared for the exhibits, with adequate housing facilities for livestock and poultry in adjoining buildings.

Miss Virginia Wilcox, with her class of Home Economics girls, had a fine display of their work on exhibit, depicting the proper methods of furnishing a home, sewing, plain and fancy, canning, preserving and food preparation.

Bruce Webb, promotion manager of the Asheville Citizen-Times, with newspapers, and had a fine display of their work on exhibit, depicting the proper methods of furnishing a home, sewing, plain and fancy, canning, preserving and food preparation.

JAKE F. NEWELL HEARD BY BIG CROWD HERE

Jake F. Newell's vote, if he gets into the United States senate chambers, will be emphatically "no" as to the repeal or modification of the 18th amendment, and not even his own party can dictate to him on a moral question, he told a mass meeting of Transylvania county Republicans here Tuesday in an appeal for their support of him as the Republican nominee to the senate.

Referring to criticized enforcement of the 18th amendment, Newell said, "The United States can enforce this law or any other law for that matter. If I am elected, and should it become necessary, I would favor calling on the United States army and the United States navy to show the scalawags and liquor heads of this country that the law can be enforced. Furthermore, the country could have enforcement of laws if citizens and candidates would quit alighting themselves with the liquor heads and booze crowd."

Continuing his argument for prohibition, Newell said that "preachers have a place in politics whenever a moral question or problem is involved.

"Liquor will be doomed," he said, "when the churches take a stand for right—all of them—and then stand. Preachers have a right to stand for decency. If a moral question is involved, then they have a right in politics."

FAVOR PROHIBITION

Discussing the revenue angle of the proposal that liquors be handled under government supervision, Newell said that should liquor come back and be sold under a tax, the federal government and not the individual states will levy, collect and benefit entirely from the tax.

"I am a prohibitionist," the speaker declared. "If I am elected, I will propose to repeal the 18th Amendment, I will vote 'no'; if it is proposed to modify the 18th amendment, I also will vote 'no'.

He said he was in favor of a protective tariff, and lighter immigration laws that will "put the bars up" and "leave America for Americans."

The speaker upheld the right of labor to bargain collectively. If elected, he declared, he would not support any "protection" to North Carolina that did not belong to this state, and would seek only that which rightfully belonged to his people.

"Discussing the depression, Mr. Newell said that he could not see how the Republicans were to blame for it. A twenty-four billion dollar depression, he said, was the consequence of the World War, he said, and another eleven billions loaned out to European countries. "I won't promise to cure the depression if you elect me," he stated emphatically—"the Democrats are promising that and they ought to be able to cure it as they have been in every other year they have been in power. Their idea of how to cure the depression is to spend more money."

Twelve thousand people are now on the North Carolina payroll, the speaker asserted, and charged that jobs were created by the Democrats to take care of the unemployed.

Crawford F. James, of Marion, Republican nominee for congress in this district, also spoke. Outstanding in his remarks was the statement that "it will leave the wet problem to the majority of the people under the plan laid out in the national platform; and I am not in favor of either repealing or modifying the 18th Amendment."

James F. Barrett, of Hendersonville, introduced Mr. James, and introduced Mr. Newell. The meeting was staged under auspices of the Transylvania County Republican executive committee, of which J. Nicholson is chairman. Mr. Nicholson presided at the meeting.

B.Y.P.U. Meeting Set for Sunday

A packed courtroom was on hand to greet the speakers, and applause was given Newell on several occasions as he touched on questions of interest. Fresh oil on the courtroom floor drew several remarks of a complimentary or satirical nature.

Associational district B. Y. P. U. meeting will be held at Carrs Hill Baptist church Sunday afternoon, beginning at 2:30 o'clock. All churches of the center district are expected to send delegates, and the public is cordially invited to attend.

An interesting and instructive program has been arranged for the afternoon.

FINE DISPLAYS ARE SEEN AT UPPER FAIR

Rosman Event Is Big Improvement Over Any Previous Fair

CERRYFIELD WINS FIRST BOOTH PLACE

Large List of Winners; Purebred Livestock Adds Interest

With twice the interest shown over that of the previous like event, Rosman Community Fair was accorded a success in every way last Saturday. Along with the increased number of entries, was also noted the improved quality of the exhibits, and a more diversified farm crop showing.

Cherryfield Calvert community was first place in the community booth contest, with Quebec second and Rosman third. No cash prizes were offered at the Rosman Fair. Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Bell won the live-at-home ribbon, 40 varieties of home grown foods being displayed.

Vast improvement was noted in the livestock exhibits. While the number of entries was small, the quality was noteworthy among the exhibits.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Hutches carried off individual display honors, with their statutory and flower display in the center of the large exhibit building. Cactus and wood depicting war memorials was cleverly displayed, banked by beautiful home grown flowers that held the center of attraction throughout the day.

Home planning and furnishing was featured by members of the home economics class under the supervision of Miss Olga Portenberry, instructor, with handwork from the classroom adding to the interest.

Displays entered by members of the vocational agriculture class from the school workshop took up a large space in the building, new methods of approved type in farm buildings and farm conveniences being shown by the boys under Professor John Owen, instructor. Gloucester Lumber company and other Rosman industries had a complete display showing the wood and wood products turned out by the mill, such as products in various finishes; raw, cooked and finished chestnut wood, tanning liquor and extract were shown. Basswood, chitling, yellow poplar, maple, white oak, red oak, locust, yellow pine, buckeye, birch, hemlock, white pine, hickory, white walnut, white ash, black gum, beech, red beech and chestnut were shown.

In the antique display was seen a dinner plate that has been in use for 85 years, entered by Mrs. T. P. Galloway, Jr.; a trinket box over two hundred years old entered by W. C. Gravelly; saddle bags carried by the late B. H. Glazener throughout the war between the States; and several quilts and spreads, one of which was handwoven in 1846 by Miss Jane Belton, who later became Mrs. S. W. Heid.

Of interest was the entry made by Tom Wood—in which he and his large draft percheron horse carried off all honors in the weight class, entered by Mrs. G. H. Galloway, Jr. and her horse tips the scales at 1850 (Continued on page five)

Contract To Be Let On Nov. 1st

State Highway Commission Makes Definite Statement About Work

WILL GIVE MANY MEN NEEDED WORK

Contract for completion of the Rosman-Pickens highway will be let by November 1, according to information received here last week by Chairman O. I. Erwin of the board of county commissioners. Work will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible, Chairman E. B. Jeffress of the State Highway commission, stated in the letter.

People of Brevard and Transylvania county have been working for years in an effort to have this important six-mile stretch of highway hard-surfaced. Agreement was made several years ago with the county officials, completed their end of the project.

Work in Pickens county has been going forward for several months, grading being now complete. The county officials completed their end of the project.

Under the method that has been used in construction of other roads by the highway commission, only local labor will be used, thus assuring a number of Transylvania citizens employment when the project is started.

Plans are now being laid by Brevard leaders for a fitting celebration of the linking of Pickens and Brevard together with a hard-surfaced highway, this also being a part of the original agreement made between the two sister states at the time agitation was following for the work to be started. A copy of the letter received by Mr. Erwin from Chairman Jeffress:
