

ESSAY CONTEST FOR AGRICULTURE BOYS

To stimulate more interest in a study of the values of the rarest and most valuable elements in crop production, the Division of Vocational Agriculture of the State Department of Education announces an essay contest among students studying vocational agriculture in the high schools of the State. The contest is a cooperative project between the Division and the Chilean Nitrate of Soda Educational Bureau.

Because of the growing interest in this phase of plant production, arrangements were made for this essay among the Agricultural High School students of the State on the importance of the rare elements in natural fertilizer materials on crop production. The contest is open to any high school student enrolled in any of the agricultural classes. There will be five prizes in each of the four Vocational Agriculture Districts of the State as follows: First prize—$15; second prize—$12.50; third prize—$10; fourth prize—$7.50 and fifth prize—$5.00. In addition to these, there will be a State prize of $25.00 and a regional prize

CROP LOAN MAN TO BE IN BREVARD SATURDAY

S. S. Williams, crop production loan collector, announces that he will be in Brevard on Saturday of this week, at the clerk of court office from ten to twelve o'clock for collection of balances on loans.

Mr. Williams states that greater portion of the Transylvania farmers who procured loans through his department last year have settled in full, only a few accounts remaining.

of $50.00 for the winner among the Agricultural students in the South. These prizes will be contributed by the Chilean Nitrate Educational Bureau.

Roy H. Thomas, State Supervisor of Vocational Agriculture, anticipates a very active interest in this contest among the more than 7500 students enrolled in the Agricultural Departments in the High Schools of the State because of the timeliness of the subject, and the live interest of the students in current factors affecting economical crop production.

Further information can be secured from Mr. Thomas by writing him at his office at State College, Raleigh, North Carolina.

ADVENTURES of ULYSSES

(By St. Clair Austin)
Ulysses, or Odysseus, was a Greek sailor who went to Troy to fight for his friend, Prince Menelaus, whose wife Helen had gone to Troy with Paris, the Trojan prince. Troy was a great city of great riches over in Asia Minor. Its king was Priam. Ulysses had agreed to help Menelaus if anything happened to him, but he had married since then and he had a son named Telemachus who was just a baby when Menelaus, the Prince of Sparta asked him to come to war. Ulysses disliked the idea of going to war and leaving his faithful wife, Penelope and his baby son, Telemachus. So he pretended he was crazy. He got his plow and began sowing salt, which made everybody think he was crazy. Ulysses expected not to go to war if the people thought he was crazy. But some clever man, much against Penelope's wishes, took Telemachus, the baby, and put him in front of the plow. Ulysses would run over him with the plow if he were crazy, and if he were not he would turn aside the plow, and so he did and they found he was not crazy. Therefore he had to go to war much against his own will.

The journey to Troy only took a few days and the war lasted ten years. Both sides suffered great losses, but Achilles, the great Greek warrior, fought almost until the close of the war. He was killed by Paris who slipped up on him while he was talking to Menelaus. Achilles was invulnerable except on the heel where Paris shot him.

Through Ulysses' cleverness, a great wooden horse was erected that could hold many men. The Greeks pretended to leave in their ships and left the horse near Troy as a peace offering. The Trojans were all asleep the warriors came out of the wooden horse and sacked the riches of Troy and then set fire to the buildings. Troy was burning and the Greeks killing those who were not burned to death.

For some of the ships the voyage lasted a few days and others became lost by the anger of the gods who sided with Troy. Ulysses had many adventures such as meeting Circe, the enchantress, on her islands where she changed many of his men to swine. She almost changed him into a fox, because she turned them into the animals their characters resembled. Finally, Ulysses made her change his men into their proper forms. Then he met the Cyclops who had but one great eye in the middle of his forehead. Ulysses deceived him by putting him to sleep with some sweet wine. Ulysses put out his great eye by putting a burning live stake in Polyphemus', the Cyclops' eye. Then all his men except those killed by Polyphemus in his cave escaped. Polyphemus heard the shouts of the men as they pushed off from shore, and he hurled large stones through the air which splashed close beside the ships, drenching the men in them. Ulysses also encountered the Sirens, the creatures who were half bird and half woman. They sang so well that it tempted any man to swim out to the island from his ship. Ulysses bade his men put wax in their ears and bind him tight to the mast so he might not jump from the ship and be eaten by the Sirens. He struggled so at the mast when they neared the island, that they had to tie him tighter. Then they moved farther away from these islands.

They had a few more adventures

OFFICERS NAB CHICKEN BEFORE IT IS COOKED

Believing that a campaign promise of several years ago—"A chicken in every pot"—was specifically applicable to their particular case, two "young men about town" took a rooster and a hen from the home of George Simpson and proceeded to fix them up in the manner that all fat chickens should be fixed.

It seems that Mr. Simpson missed his two chicks Sunday morning and forthwith proceeded uptown and told Sheriff Wood and Chief Freeman about his shortage. With Sherlock Holmes effectiveness the two officers went to the home of Henry Collins on Kings Creek and there they found one, the rooster, in the pot and evidence of the hen having been killed, cooked and eaten.

The two believers in political prophecy as expected, denied having anything to do with Mr. Simpson's chicken shortage but Emmet Bell and Lester Bowen were brought to jail (against their will) and the rooster was left a-boilin' in the pot.

CHEVROLET PEOPLE ARE AT HIGH PRODUCTION

DETROIT, Mich. Feb. 19.—With a payroll almost equal to its all-time high, Chevrolet entered February well on the way toward capacity operation, M. E. Coyle, general manager, announced here today. Production increased more than 50 per cent during the last week of January—from 2,141 cars Jan. 24 to 3,304 on Jan. 31—and coordination of activities in the 21 domestic plants was proceeding at a rate which indicated steady progress from this time on.

Dealers throughout the country, Mr. Coyle said, will soon be making immediate delivery of any model desired.

Payrolls on Jan. 31 totaled 53,203 persons, as compared with 33,727 at the corresponding period last year. The payroll increase for the week was nearly 2,400 persons. These figures include only the workers on Chevrolet's own payroll. Inclusion of Fisher Body workers producing bodies for the new Chevrolet would practically double that total.

"Our own direct payroll," said Mr. Coyle, "breaks all Chevrolet records since the spring of 1929, and is the largest we have ever had at this time of year. As a matter of fact, it is within 3,000 of our greatest payroll of all time."

Mr. Coyle also emphasized the fact that the company is taking back its employees, and will have no need for new personnel at any of its plants.

at a friendly island called Phraecia. Finally Ulysses landed on Ithaca, his native island. His son, Telemachus, was now over twenty years old; the war lasted ten years and the voyage back home was ten years, making a total of twenty years away from home. With the help of his son he killed the suitors who had tried to marry his wife Penelope, because they all thought Ulysses was dead. All of Ulysses' men had been killed in the storm near Phraecia. Ulysses' faithful dog, Argus, who waited patiently and faithfully for twenty years for the return of his master, feebly expressed his joy at seeing his master by wagging his tail and then dropped dead. Argus, the dog, was the first one to recognize his master Ulysses, but theirs was a great reunion when Ulysses, Penelope, and Telemachus met.
