

Brevard Is Beautiful

Here's just what can be seen by the discriminating motorist who enters the "little gem among the hills in Transylvania county" if he enters via the Hendersonville highway: Looking to the right as the crest of the little knoll is reached at the cross-street used as the entrance to the Brevard College grounds one can see a most magnificent barn, with its windows and doors rotten and looking just ready to fall down and go boom if more than one big rat were to get on either the north or south side of the loft.

Then as one reaches the French Broad intersection a most interesting sight is open to view, a sight that gives an imaginative mind something to mull over and wonder about. Master pieces of what surely were years and years ago, automobiles of the first order, testify in mute evidence of a flashy, smoothly purring piece of machinery that in the days of yore undoubtedly gave their owners worlds of pleasure as the occupants of the then beautiful cars were whisked up the steep grades, around the breath-taking curves, across beautiful valleys and by sloping hillsides that culminated into towering peaks, which helped give this section the name "Land of the Sky." But the days of usefulness are gone for the poor old autos that now tell the world that passes through Brevard that "they have fought a good fight."

Finished the course, and henceforth nothing is left to do but lie piled up, adding to the beauty of their surroundings.

Then the unwary traveler reaches Apple Tree street, which judging by its name, should soon be one of blossoms and sweet smells, and probably would if some old pieces of stoves, multitudinous tin cans, fine pieces of paper and particles of clothing which at one time might have been the last touch that made one of the fair maidens of this beautiful little town look all the more sweet. But the cook stove has done its duty to mankind, assisted in preparing plain foods into something that was nourishing and tasteful, probably adding the last touches to the foods that came from the tin cans that now help it to keep the lot from being entirely bare.

Just to the right, however, there was a cow that had all the earmarks of present-day needs, sleek, healthy and promising. Maybe the cow was one of the fool-you type, and can exist on such as is to be found in the territory, but we suspect the stuff that is to be found there would be more to the liking of a bill-gnat, and from looks of the cow are certain that she gets some stall feeding.

Letting the eye casually turn to the left again as the car starts up the stiff grade there is to be seen cans, big cans, little cans, rusty cans, bright cans, smashed cans and straight cans, and just cans, along with other appurtenances thereunto belonging. Too much splendor for the motorist to take in all at one time, so he would naturally turn his eyes again to the right, where lo, and behold, there are more, only in greater variety.

Were the motorist an engineer he would really assume that the Probert street extension had been at one time subject to sliding or succumbing to the elements, and had been reinforced (with a good running start so as to guard against such a calamity.

Up, nearly to the square and the eye would have to be drawn to what could be a nice place were it not for the fact that there is entirely too much of this and that which should be placed at a more inconspicuous place. This between the street and the telephone exchange.

Of course there is no way of telling just where a motorist would go after entering through such a "conglomeration of beauty" but if he were to turn to the right upon reaching the square, down half a block, and then to the left and stop in front of the Transylvania Times office, he could "topple off" the load of beauty that he had already seen while entering the town and cast his eyes to the right upon a vacant lot that is used for every kind of dumping ground that could be imagined, the rubbish to be seen in the vacant lot in front of The Times office ranging in size from one-quarter inch to several feet, and in character and make-up from the Lord only knows what to guess again.

It's a PRETTY town, you bet.

Lost His Wife: Is Happy Now
Greensboro—Chief Pons Duckworth is a man who will lend a helping hand, when possible.

For instance, he has been on the lookout this week for a blonde woman who left her husband and home here to "take up" with another man in Burke county. So far, he hasn't had any success, but there's hope that he will have something to report to the husband at a later date.

It seems the man here complained in a letter that a man in Burke county, name unknown, had wired a sum of money to the wife to provide her transportation to that county. She accepted it, and insofar as the husband knows, is now in the care of the third party of the triangle.

But the Greensboro husband isn't upset about it at all. His letter had a closing paragraph which read: "If you find who he is, please let me know. I want to send her the rest of her clothes and thank him for taking her off my hands."

MEDICAL ADVICE

If you want to...
...relieve constipation safely
...regulate the dose to suit your exact need
...avoid danger of bowel strain
—use a liquid laxative

Can constipation be safely relieved? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" declare thousands who have followed their advice and know.

You are not apt to cure your constipation with salts, pills, and tablets, or any habit-forming cathartic. But you can relieve this condition just by gentle regulation with a suitable liquid laxative.

Why Hospitals Use a liquid laxative

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can be controlled. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Will not irritate kidneys. The right liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement, with no discomfort at the time, or afterward. "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" declare thousands who have followed their advice and know.

In buying any laxative, read the label. If it contains a doubtful drug, don't take it. If you don't know what is in it, don't chance it. The contents of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is stated plainly on the label; fresh herbs, pure pepsin, active senna.

Its very taste tells you Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. Drug stores have it, ready for use, in big bottles.
