PREVENT CHICK DISEASE BY PROPER SANITATION

Although no cure has been found for chick coccidiosis, a particularly destructive disease, it may be prevented when proper sanitation steps are taken, says H. C. Gauger, instructor in poultry science at State College.

The parasites which cause the disease are usually present wherever there is any poultry, but older birds sometimes harbor the parasites without suffering any serious ill effects. It is the chick between four and 12 weeks of age that suffers most.

Infection starts when a chick eats the microscopic eggs of the parasite. The eggs break open in the intestines of the chicks and release myriads of living bodies which attack the mucus membranes.

Infected chicks are weak, listless, and droopy. The appetite is gone and they huddle in groups as though they are cold. There is usually a whitish, watery dropping which has a tendency to paste up the fluff around the tail. Infected chicks soon die.

Chicks should not be allowed to eat the parasite's eggs, says Gauger. The brooder houses should be kept sanitary and every precaution taken to keep the eggs from being tracked into the houses from other places.

Infected chicks should be removed immediately from the flock and killed and either burned or buried deeply. The litter and sand in the brooder houses should be changed every other day or oftener. Only fresh, clean material should be used for litter.

While the chicks are in the brooder house the runways should be prepared by spading or plowing the soil so as to turn the infected top soil under. If this is impracticable, the chicks should be restricted to a limited area, which can be covered with sand or gravel, or they should be confined to an outdoor, wire-floor sun porch until 10 or 12 weeks old.

OLD LANDMARK IS BEING MOVED ON MAIN STREET

Another landmark in Brevard is being removed this week. The old one-story frame building on West Main street, which was built about 35 years ago by C. C. Kilpatrick for Nathan McMinn, is being torn down, and the lumber purchased by G. W. Hayes will be used by him in building a carpentry shop.

An interesting fact concerning this old building is pointed out by Mr. Kilpatrick that he erected the building at a cost of $300 to Mr. McMinn, who in turn leased it to Mr. Kilpatrick for a period of six years for use as an undertaking establishment. Mr. Kilpatrick paid a rental of $5 per month on the building, thereby making the income in rentals for the six years equal to more than the original cost of the building.

BOWLING ALLEYS ON MAIN STREET OPENED

Brevard's new bowling alleys, located on Main street, were christened last Friday night with a win by the local team over an Asheville crew brought over by Beverly Trantham.

The new place of amusement has all new equipment and is attracting a number of people.

The first cargo of furs was sent from Canada to England in 1676.

Within a few weeks after Roentgen discovered X-rays in 1895, physicians had begun using them in examining broken bones.
