Henderson Asks For More Definite Information On Storage Reservoir

EDITOR THE TIMES:

Mr. Editor, I am neither for nor against the dam for I have no authoritative information, and I don't believe any one else in the county has and it is an imposition to have some people filling the credulous people with all kinds of imaginary calamities that have never been thought of or contemplated or would even happen if the dam is built.

You can publish the following letter if you wish to:

There is an old and to some extent a very true saying that our worst troubles are those that never happen. Just imaginary troubles, just a fear that some great calamity will occur. And I feel sure a great many of our people are today suffering, really suffering from what they imagine could happen if the proposed French Broad dam is built. And this fear arises from a lack of confidence in the fairness and justice of our great president and leader. And in view of his every utterance and his every effort to relieve suffering and distress this is unfounded.

Do you think for a moment that such a man would deliberately confiscate our property, take it without just compensation contrary to our constitution he has sworn to uphold and abide by and contrary to his every word and act since March 4, 1837? Do you think he would say, "Well, just in this one instance we will depart from our principles and do evil that good may come. We will destroy these few people that we may do good to a greater number." Well, I know that he is not going to do that, and if all receive due compensation then none has anything to fear. But I tell you now that those who would claim a fictitious or sentimental value are going to be disappointed.

As I say, lots of our good people are doing some real mental suffering. I will admit it is an injustice for those in authority to prolong that suffering.

BLOOD POOL CAUSES MUCH EXCITEMENT

Much excitement was caused in the Island Ford section the first of this week when residents heard several shots fired in the direction of the bridge and upon investigation discovered a pool of blood on the bridge, with a trail leading to the edge of the bridge, and signs of blood also on rocks in the river.

Natural conclusion was that someone had been murdered there and the body thrown into the river. Sheriff Tom Wood was notified, who went to the scene and after investigation, was preparing to have the river dragged in an effort to find the body.

However it was discovered that some people who were close to the bridge had heard a dog howling and yapping, then a shot, followed by a whimper as the dog's life ebbed. This was taken as evidence that it was only a dog that had lost its life.

Hershey, who is connected with the TVA with headquarters in Knoxville, and was in Brevard Wednesday giving out information concerning this federal project.

The idea of the project, as explained by Mr. Hershey, is for the purpose of getting the farmers to plant and propagate such trees on their premises as will aid in preventing soil erosion and also will be productive of fruit, berries and nuts which will be beneficial to the farmer and to the housewife.

Various contests will be sponsored by the government in this project, in cooperation with the newspapers in the section to further inform and educate the people as to the value of this tree crop propagation program.

Newspaper releases will be made by the TVA at occasional intervals, giving information and instructions regarding the various phases of the enterprise. One is construction of a 210-foot dam near Bent Creek in Buncombe county which would put water over the railroad tracks at Rosman; series of smaller dams from Asheville to Rosman; dams on several tributary streams; and development of the valley.
