

IMPROPER METHODS COST SAYS PARRISH

A total of $45,000,000 a year is lost by the American poultry industry as a result of improper methods and handling eggs, according to data compiled by C. F. Parrish, extension poultryman at State College.

This staggering loss can be greatly reduced by removing male birds from the flocks when not needed for breeding purposes, gathering the eggs more often, caring for them properly, and observing other methods of good flock management.

Fertile eggs will start hatching when exposed to sufficient heat for a short time, but infertile eggs may be left in a temperature of 193 degrees Fahrenheit for 72 hours and still be good for food.

Healthy, vigorous males removed from the flock should be penned separately and saved for breeding purposes the next season. The other males should be disposed of since they will eat more food than they are worth if kept over the non-breeding season.

In hot weather, eggs should be gathered at least twice a day in wire baskets and immediately removed to a cool cellar or room where the temperature is 68 degrees or less and where there is a relatively high humidity. The eggs should then be spread on a table or wire screen so as to cool thoroughly before being packaged.

The use of good nesting material and proper sanitation around the hen houses will decrease the number of dirty eggs produced. Many good eggs are sold at low prices simply because they do not look fresh and clean.

At least 20 nests by 12 by 14 inches should be provided for each 100 laying hens. The nesting material should be changed frequently.

Nine Jews Known Dead in Nazi-Land Berlin—At least nine Jews were slain during the disorders attendant upon the suppression of the "Roehm revolt," the Jewish Telegraphic Agency learned Monday.

The death of four Jews—three men and a woman—in Hirschberg, Silesia, was confirmed. The four had been reported shot "while attempting to escape."

Reports at Prague said the bullet wounds which caused the deaths of the four were found in the faces and temples of the victims.

CATTLE SHIPMENT IS HELD UP BY STATE

According to advices received here, the first shipment of cattle from the drought area of the west that was scheduled to have reached the county two weeks ago, would still be held up pending inspection and treatment. Cattle coming into Western North Carolina will be unloaded at Asheville where diseased animals will be killed after close inspection. It is expected that the first shipment of 750 head will be received here within ten days.

RALEIGH, July 9—Four quarantine points where all of the relief cattle shipped into North Carolina from the middle west will be held until after they have been inspected and found free from disease, have been established, it was announced Saturday by Mrs. Thomas O'Berry, state FERA administrator. These points are Asheville, where all shipments over the Southern railway will be concentrated; Monroe, for Seaboard Airline shipments; Raleigh, Norfolk and Southern, and Goldsboro, Atlantic Coast Line.

Adequate stock yards are already available in most of these places. But where they are not large enough, they are being enlarged. It is expected that adequate quarantine yards will be ready by the time the cattle shipments start arriving some time next week. Orders have already been sent to Kansas City and St. Louis stock yards to start shipments any time The detention pens at Asheville are ready for use now, the FERA was informed Saturday.

The cattle will be held in these pens at these four points until after they have been tested and pronounced free from disease. Any found diseased will be slaughtered and burned. As soon as they have been tested they will be shipped to the various other unloading points in the state where they will be pastured.
