THE TIMES NOT INTERESTED IN THINGS POLITICAL
 While there are being carried in The Times this week, as was the fact last week, several articles of political nature, all paid by either the Republican or Democratic party officials, this newspaper wishes it distinctly understood that such items are being carried purely as paid advertising and in no way speak for The Times.

The Times is not interested in partisan politics. While the editor may vote for this candidate on the Republican ticket and that candidate on the Democratic ticket. The Times will in no wise boost for any one man or any set of men.
 We claim it the privilege of all citizens to vote strictly as they please, "scratching" any candidate, and fail to see wherein any person is called on to "vote straight" unless the entire ticket put out by either party justifies such action.

The Times is a county newspaper, serving both Democrats and Republicans, and as a county newspaper plays strictly hands off when it comes to partisan politics. We have plenty of space to sell and either of the two parties may have all space they have money to pay for.

THE POULTRY INDUSTRY IN THE MOUNTAINS

(Hendersonville Times-News)
 The Transylvania Times says that the statement has been made that ninety per cent of the eggs used in Buncombe county are shipped in from other states; and the Brevard newspaper believes 80 per cent of the eggs used in that county are not produced in Transylvania. The Times wants to know if enough eggs to supply the local demand can be produced in the county, and if not, what is the reason.

The answer is that the eggs can be produced in Transylvania, but the chances are that the people over there will not take the trouble and do the hard work that is necessary to make a success of the poultry business. The people of Transylvania and all this section are accustomed to getting along without the use of much man-power or brain power and both must be used in the poultry business. This mountain country is a country where people can manage to live with very little work and without straining their brain capacity; and many of our people have learned how to do both. And, in addition to their natural inclinations, Uncle Sam now comes along and proposes to take care of a large proportion of the population, affording them subsistence without work.

Therefore, the chances are that there is going to be less and less work done in Transylvania, Henderson and all of the mountain counties. The people are going to take time to enjoy the climate and scenery and do not propose to let work trouble them.
 However, The Times-News can tell The Transylvania Times that the poultry business in this county is in about the same condition as the poultry business in that county and Buncombe and others. A large proportion of the eggs consumed in this county are produced in Tennessee and other states. This condition will be changed when the people living on the land, the people who are in position to make poultry raising profitable, use the intelligence and energy they possess to make a success of the business.

The quality of the poultry and eggs of this mountain country is not excelled anywhere in the United States. The mountain counties ought to be raising poultry to supply all the demands of local consumption and, in addition, hundreds of carloads annually for sale elsewhere at cash premiums. Poultry and eggs from this section would bring better prices in the markets than the products of any other section—if the people of this section would learn how to produce and market, and capitalize the climate and other natural conditions, which are a great aid to the production of the finest poultry and poultry products.

The Transylvania Times speaks of the cost of going into the poultry business on a large scale and of the fact that many of the people of that county do not have the necessary capital. Unfortunately, this is the present condition of many residents of all the mountain counties; and they will remain in that condition until they lift themselves out of it. They may be able to get bare subsistence from their government, or scrape along on poverty-stricken incomes, but in order to lift themselves out of poverty they must develop the resources and possibilities of their section; they must make use of the intelligence and muscle they possess—and every man must do it for himself.
 The Transylvania Times refers to the vast poultry business of East Tennessee. That is a business that had its beginning on the farms of that section and at a time when the majority of the farmers were in worse financial condition than the present financial status of the average land owner in the mountains of North Carolina.

 The farmers of East Tennessee, working with what they had to work with, started the poultry business on the farms; and, laboring under great difficulties, have brought it to its present vast proportions; millions of dollars worth of poultry and eggs being shipped out of that section every year. The large producers followed in later years, after the efforts of the small farm producers had made a name for East Tennessee in the poultry world.

This course can be taken here and similar results can be attained. There is not a farmer in Henderson county who cannot raise his own poultry and eggs for home consumption and some for the markets. Thus the farm supply would be assured and the home markets would be supplied and in a few years the business with outside markets would develop.
 Such changes cannot be secured by talk, or by standing around and wishing that something could be done about it; but this section can be put in the poultry business right up in the front rank with East Tennessee by a farm population with the intelligence and energy necessary to succeed with the job.

WHAT I THINK ABOUT BREVARD

Editor of The Times:
 After a very pleasant trip from New Hampshire to North Carolina through the Shenandoah valley and over your beautiful and thrilling Smoky Mountains on my way to Beaufort, S. C., an accident halted me and fate threw me among some very pleasant people of Brevard, who have been extremely courteous and have done everything possible to make me comfortable while recuperating from an accident. The treatment received at your hospital was gratifying in every particular. I cannot speak too highly of the services received at that institution.

I am more pleased with the people than I am of the town. I feel the people here are worthy of a more beautiful and cheerful place. It is not economy to have dirty streets, and it is not economy to have dark, cheerless streets at night. A few dollars spent on your streets to keep them clean, and a few dollars spent on electricity and brightening up, making the evenings more cheerful, will bring a return far greater than the outlay. What is nicer than a clean, neat, cheery little town?
 For its location, this town should be second to none, and it can be accomplished with very little outlay.

THE CCC TO CONTINUE

(Statesville Landmark)
 President Roosevelt has announced that the CCC—Civilian Conservation Corps—will be continued indefinitely. This is one work project established by Mr. Roosevelt soon after he took office that has met general approval and his determination to continue it will meet general approval. The CCC is no longer regarded as an unemployment measure alone, although it is that. But in far larger way the spiritual and moral value to the workers and the aid to conservation far exceed all other benefits, great as they are. Since the corps was organized, in the spring of 1933, 850,000 men have been enrolled and the cost has been $433,000,000.

As enlistments expire others are taken on, the personnel changing from time to time, giving a larger number of young men opportunity to enjoy the benefits. First off is the moral value of the discipline, under the direction of army officers. In fact to the army officers who have commanded the civilian corps most credit is due for good results. The men are not controlled by rigid army discipline. If they are not satisfied and wish to leave they can—any time. But they must obey the rules of the camp or get out. In that the great majority support the commander. The discipline is mild enough but sufficient to prevent the rowdies taking charge, as they might do if unrestrained. The order and the discipline is highly beneficial and most of the men are delighted with the experience. The forestry work is instructive. The men learn much about conservation that will be valuable to them afterward, no matter what their line of work. The work is also of great value in the conservation of public forests.

The men have their board and keep and a certain wage. The rule is to take on only the unemployed who have dependents. When they are signed up a modest portion of the monthly wage is paid to them each pay day. The bulk of the amount is sent home to the dependents to whom it is assigned by the enlisted man when he enters the corps. The men have the necessities of life and sufficient spending money. The balance of their earnings go to the support of their dependents, who would otherwise be on relief.
 The CCC is a great institution. Few of the critics of the president's policies would attack it.

Louis XIII Coins Unearthed
 A large jar containing several thousand small copper coins was uncovered at La Roche-Eur-Yon, France. The coins were dated 1642, and bore the image of Louis XIII.

EAST FORK

Rev. L. B. Hayes, presiding elder of the Waynesville district, preached at the East Fork Methodist church Sunday afternoon and immediately after the sermon quarterly conference was held with delegates from the churches of the Rosman circuit.
 Rev. J. N. Hall and mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, were in our community Saturday calling at the homes of several friends.
 Mr. and Mrs. Frazier and daughter Miss Caroline of Asheville were Sunday guests of Mr and Mrs. E. E. Gillespie.

Miss Rachel Gravelly is spending several weeks in Pickens with Mrs. C. M. Dockins.
 Mr. and Mrs. Kile Whitmire and family were East Fork visitors Sunday.

Mrs. Clyde Brown visited her mother Sunday, stopping by on her way to Gloucester where she is teaching school this year.
 Frost was reported from most places in our vicinity last week. There was frost for three mornings. Flowers were killed and potato vines blackened, which seems to be the extent of damage by frost.

We noticed week before last where our editor said we must have buildings for our county fair or have no fair. That is just where you are mistaken, Mr. Editor, if you don't believe we can have a county fair without suitable buildings just wait until next year and see. We did this year and had a good time, too, one that nobody need be ashamed of. Of course, it was a bit muddy and sort of hard to get around to where the live stock was kept, but it can be done. A year ago we thought we were to have buildings built at the county farm just for the purpose of holding the county fair and we understand plans were made and help asked for and promise from CWA funds, later these plans fell through.

Personally we think that if both could not have been done, it would have been just as wise a plan to have the buildings in which to hold the county fair and leave off the swimming hole in Brevard (pardon me, I mean pool). Certainly it would have meant more to the people in Transylvania county and, of course, that includes Brevard.

 As for that swimming pool drawing tourists to the town of Brevard we failed to see how. Now that the pool is all finished, we may be allowed more funds for worthy projects. Won't those having the power to do so please pull for the help to put up the much needed buildings and so help every one in the county if they desire to take advantage of the chance to be helped. Honestly, we can't think of anything that would be of more benefit to the county folks as a whole than a suitable place to hold our county fair.
