C. OF C. OFFICE TO BE OPENED AT ONCE

A committee appointed by the directors to have charge of incidental matters pertaining to establishment of permanent headquarters for the civic body, unanimously selected Mrs. Harris as secretary, and are making other necessary arrange-ments for opening the office this Mrs. Harris has already started on her duties.

The membership committee reported that several people who are operating businesses in Brevard had as yet not paid their membership fee, and this committee was instructed to proceed with the drive for complete cooperation in the move to sell Brevard to the outside public.

Stress was laid on the fact that the Brevard Chamber of Commerce is a community proposition, and as such deserves the active support of every citizen. Further, it was pointed out that all people of the community have every right and are urged to attend all meetings and take part in carrying on the work of the cham-

With possibilities of liquor stores being set up on the Caesar's Head highway near the county line and the same on the Pickens road, much speculation is going on in Transylvania county as to just how the situation can be handled here.

Added to this is also the fact that some authorities claim that under the law passed by the North Caroline law passed by the North Carolina legislature last week presumably relating only to Pasquotank county, any person has the right to transport four quarts of whiskey into North Carolina, and not violate the law. The particular part of this bill referred to states:

"Provided, that this provision shall not prohibit an individual entering the state from having in his posses-sion not to exceed four quarts of alcoholic beverages."

Lightning Injures Three Girls Friday

Miss Lillian Dodgin, seventeen-vear-old daughter of Mrs. Less Lov-ing of the Reid's Siding community, was severely injured last Friday when she was struck by lightning. Two other children, Mary Dodgin, age 13, and "Booby" Whitmire sevenvear-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elbart Whitmire, were shocked by the bolt that injued the older Dodgin girl, but soon recovered sufficiently enough to be taken to their homes by friends.

Miss Lillian Dodgin was brought to Lyday Memorial hospital in Brevard, where her condition was at first regarded us rather serious. She was burned about the left shoulder, the spine, the left leg, and the heel of
shreds. Her clothing was considerably torn and scorched.
The three girls were waiting for

The three girls were waiting for the mail man at the entance of the Reid's Siding road two miles this side of Lake Toxaway when the storm struck. They sought shelter from the hail and rain under a large oak tree near the roadside, and the fact that the lightning, which first fact that the lightning, which first struck the tree, was carried to the ground on the opposite side from where the girls were standing probably accounts for their not being ininstantly killed. Miss Dodgin was evidently standing on a large feed root of the oak the lightning following the root efter it had struck the tree and glancing onto a log nearby. The log was badly split.

The fact that the heel was most severely injured causes conclusion that the lightning glanced upward of Miss Dodgin's body instead of coming down as lightning is generally thought to travel.
