

PISGAH FOREST TO AGAIN BE OPENED

Three Hundred Hunters Will Be Allowed To Kill One Deer Each

Three hundred hunters from many sections of the country will each be permitted to try for a deer in Pisgah National Forest beginning November 25, according to announcement made here this week by J. Herbert Stone, supervisor of the forest.

The three hundred hunters to be selected in a public drawing from the applications filed will be permitted to participate in the hunt. Each will be allowed to kill one adult deer of either sex.

The hunt this year will be staged on a 15,000-acre tract in the Pink Beds, Slate Rock creek, Pilot Cove and Bradley creek sections of the Pisgah Forest. Also included in the hunting territory will be the headwaters of Lookingglass creek, down to and including Big Bear and Pen branch. This area is well within the preserve but is readily accessible to hunters.

Public deer hunts are conducted by the forestry officials to remove surplus deer from the area. The deer population in this year's territory is in excess of the food supply.

Application blanks may be obtained by hunters at the Pisgah National Forest office in the Arcade building in Asheville or at the forest ranger's headquarters at Pisgah Forest. The applications must reach the office of the forest supervisor on or before October 24.

The public drawing will be held by the Asheville Chamber of Commerce on October 25. Three hundred applicants will be drawn. An additional 200 will be selected as alternates. The 300 will be notified and given until November 12 to accept the dates assigned them and to file the hunting fee of five dollars. On November 14 a sufficient number of alternates to replace those who have not paid will be notified. The alternates must make payment by November 23.

Hunters will be privileged to hunt for a total of three days, unless a kill is made, in which event the hunter withdraws from the area, taking his deer with him.

No license is required from the state or county for hunting or killing a deer in the preserve. Inasmuch as the Pisgah preserve is a national institution, non-residents of the state will share equally with residents in the privilege of hunting, it was pointed out.

Brevard is usually the center for hunters who have come here in previous years.

Forestry Work Will Get Attention Here

(W. C. Maness, Asst. Co. Agt.)

R. W. Graeber, extension forester, and his assistant, Mr. Page, were here last week to discuss the problems of forestry. In order to reach as many people as possible two meetings were held, one being with the vocational agriculture boys at Rosman and the other with some of the demonstration farmers in the county.

For the meeting with the boys a strip of pine woods was selected in which to hold the meeting in order to refer to the trees in giving the explanation. It was pointed out to the boys that the woods should never be pastured because of that fact that in so doing all young trees or undergrowth is killed, erosion takes place and the growth of the larger and only trees is greatly retarded. Other things of importance explained to the boys were the prevention of fire and care in thinning.

The explanation of forest management given to the demonstration farmers was chiefly that of reforestation and general care of farm woods. It was pointed out that seedlings should be set out on eroded areas where not useful for cultivation and that by no means should all the seed trees be cut. One or two seed trees should always be left on each acre of land.

Literature on seedlings, the price, and how to set them will be sent from Raleigh to each demonstration farmer and to any other interested in securing the information.

Will Let Contract For Stretch of 284 at Raleigh Today

With two crews of workmen engaged on Highway No. 284 already at work on a five mile stretch on the Transylvania side, contract is expected to be let on Thursday of this week by the State Highway Commission for three and one-half miles of the road on the Haywood county side.

The project will probably cost $100,000 or more but the funds for this will come from that which was set aside for this project last year and will not take any from this year's funds.

The road will be twenty feet wide, and the two bridges will be built of reinforced concrete and 172,400 pounds of steel. Since this road is a federal project, the bridges must have a minimum load capacity of 15 tons.

People of both Transylvania and Haywood counties have been working to have this entire road completed for some time, and are elated over prospects of its completion in the near future. The road will tie in with the Scenic Park highway and will be a decided asset to Brevard.

Willing To Marry But Did Not Have Necessary Money

They both had the same notion as to marriage, but neither of them had any money, so a young chap and his would-be bride went away from the court house last Saturday without the little slip of paper so necessary to wedded bliss.

Register of Deeds Jess Galloway tells that the young couple came into his office, shyly, as many of them do, and "er-ah-uh" asked if they might get a license. Certainly, they were told, and the register started filling out the blank spaces on the certificate.

All questions were answered with a little hesitancy, as the couple evidently were not of the Hollywood-Reno type that go about getting married every so often and then divorced and married again all in the short span of a few months.

After the blanks were all filled, the girl signed the name of her swain and her own name, and seemed to be very happy indeed that this ordeal was over . . . but

"That will be five dollars, please," said Mr. Galloway in his suave manner.

"Huh! Five dollars! Why we didn't know we had to pay anybody but the preacher, and we just barely got enough to pay him . . . Is that right? Five dollars?" And the statement was reiterated—three dollars to the state and two dollars to the county, making a total of five of Uncle Sam's one dollar bills.

So, like the young man that had many possessions, "they went away sorrowful" with the happiness gone from their faces.

MASTERS MURDER TAKES QUEER TURN

Louie Whitmire and Arthur Petit Each Serve Terms On Separate Counts

Louie Whitmire, of Rosman, is now in the state prison serving a sentence of from fifteen to twenty-five years for the murder of Jess Masters.

Arthur Petit, of Rosman, returned to his home Sept. 19th after serving a little over four years of a five to fifteen year sentence for the murder of Jess Masters.

Masters was slain on August 15, 1926, and his badly decomposed body found nineteen days later.

Louie Whitmire, Tal W. Petit and Arthur Petit were arrested following finding of the body of Masters in September, 1926, and a coroner's jury released the two Petits, holding Whitmire to the December term of Superior court at which time he was tried and convicted without going on the stand and sentenced to serve from fifteen to twenty-five years for the crime.

After serving four years of his sentence, Whitmire was paroled by Governor O. Max Gardner and allowed to return to his home. However, Whitmire did not stay clear of the law very long and was soon arrested on a charge of larceny.

Faced with the problem of going back to the penitentiary to complete his sentence, Louie told Sheriff T. E. Patton and Jailer Tom Wood that it was Arthur Petit who slew Masters and that he (Whitmire) should not be returned to the pen. His story was checked and sounded plausible. Investigation of the matter was made and Arthur Petit and his uncle, Tal Petit, were arrested and held to court.

Tal Petit was released, and Arthur tried on the charge, with Whitmire appearing as chief witness for the state. Judge Hoyle Sink, presiding at the term of court, sentenced young Petit to the pen for a term of from five to fifteen years.

While Petit was still serving his sentence in the state pen, Whitmire was again arrested on larceny and other charges and sentenced at the April, 1933, term of Superior court here to serve 2 to 3 years. Whitmire served out his time and again returned to Rosman. Again in 1935 he was arrested this time on charge of carrying a concealed weapon and sentenced to serve sixty days. Again Whitmire paid his debt to the state

Legislative Session Still Problematical

An extra session of the state legislature may be called, according to Wade Lucas, city editor of The Raleigh Times, afternoon paper of the Capitol City and commentator on things political in The Sunday Charlotte Observer. And then, there very probably will be no extra session of the legislature, Mr. Lucas says.

In his Sunday column in The Observer last Sunday Mr. Lucas answers a query from The Transylvania Times as follows:

C. M. Douglas, of Brevard, writes to ask if we know when or if Governor Ehringhaus will call a special session of the legislature. The governor hardly is likely to call any special session if he can possibly get around it. When he deems the occasion ripe he may cut loose with something about the social security act and how it affects this state, and at the same time don't be surprised if he says there will not be any special session.

At the risk of getting out on a limb and having His Excellency saw off said limb, we will say, Mr. Douglas, that, if a special session should be called around the first of the year, don't be surprised. So also don't be surprised if later on you learn that the sales tax is bringing in so much money that it may not be necessary to have the lawmakers and laugh-provokers, if the legislators may be called that, back in Raleigh this winter.

Of course, there may be a question of using the sales tax money for such things as an old age pension assistance, but former Gov. O. Max Gardner will hardly be surprised to learn that the state revenue stream he once saw dry almost completely up now looks like a river cutting great big capers.
