Improved Practices Put In By Farmers In Transylvania—Silos, Legumes
(W. D. Deaver, of the Davidson River community, is digging a forty ton trench silo this week. "At first," said Mr. Deaver, "I was skeptical of the plan of putting feed in the ground, but seeing it being done," Mr. Deaver assisted in filling one of the trench silos last year and has seen for himself that the plan is sound.)

Rev. J. K. Henderson of the South Brevard section has cut two acres of fine soybean hay. The heavy rain Monday is making it a bit difficult on curing. Mr. Henderson plans to sow crimson clover just as soon as the soybean hay can be removed from the ground. The crimson clover will be turned next spring to help restore a portion of the plant food removed by cutting the soybeans for hay. Mr. Henderson has started on a feed and soil building program that is very commendable. His plans call for improving two acres each year. The two acres on which the soybeans were grown and where the crimson clover is to be seeded had a good application of ground limestone this spring. The effect of which could be seen by soybeans from shoulder to head high. Austin Hosked has started a most interesting pasture and soil building project on the Joe Zachary place at Calvert, which place Mr. Hosked bought some time ago. It is most gratifying to see the rye, and grasses responding to the liberal application of lime and phosphate which this old red hill received only a few days back. To the present seeded rye and grasses will be added lespedeza next spring. Mr. Hosked expects to make this one of the attractive spots in the Calvert community. (Continued on Back Page)
