State Loses $3,000,000

John G. Winant, chairman of the So-cial Security board, revealed last week that North Carolina will lose approximately $3,000,000 that will be collected January 1 from employers for unemployment insurance—that is, so far as the board is concerned.

That is because North Carolina has no unemployment insurance legislation adequate to meet the requirements of the board.

Under the social security act, States having enacted an unemployment insurance act acceptable to the Social Security board will be credited with their share of the funds from the Federal government and thus enabled to benefit from the social security program. Those without such State laws will receive nothing for unemployment insurance. The money paid by their employers will go into the Federal treasury or be distributed to other States.
