nature be disallowed. A commission was appointed by the 1935 legislature's bill which had as spe-

One Group Would Put State On Manufacturing And Distributing List

RALEIGH, Jan. 20 .- Liquor and sales legislation continued to hold the spotlight in the legislative halls this week, with possibility of a state-wide referendum during the fall of 1937 being to the forefront to dispose of the much-talked whiskey matter, and the possibility that a two-cent general sales tax would supplant the threecent tax now in force.

Liquor Bills

The bill calling for a state vote on the liquor question was placed in the hopper last week, while the second bill which would place the state of North Carolina in the manufacturing and distributing business was introduced by Representative Hanford of Alamance ounty last Thursday.

The Hanford bill would set up a State commission of three members, appointed by the Governor, which would have authority: (1) Equip and operate four distilleries in four different sections of the State: (2) Fix prices at which liquor should be sold to county boards and by and with consent of the county boards fix retail prices; (3) Test liquors; and (4) Purchase all liquor needed by the county boards in excess of that manufactured by the State.

County boards would have power of general operation of stores, fix hours opening and closing, etc. The counboards would be named jointly by the boards of commissioners, education and health of the several counties. Hanford explained that he was particularly interested in getting before the assembly for consideration the liquor manufacturing phase of the question.

Sales Tax Plans

Amendments to the budget revenue bill, which provides for exemption of only the nine articles of food carried in the original sales tax act, proposing extension of exemption to come nearer including "all" necessities as stipulated in the State Democratic platform. and for lowering the rate to two per cent and allowing no exemption, were referred to a sub-committee Tuesday. Advocates of reducing the sales tax rate to a flat two per cent without exemptions contend that such a course would prove greater benefit to the people than the exemptions would be designed to aid, and at the same time would make administration of the tax simpler and prevent wholesale evasion. It was estimated that the exemptions would cut the yield by 25 per cent, the flat reductions by a third,
