Will Complete Pisgah Forest Route To Wagon Road

CHANDLER IS LOW BIDDER

Will Give Fine Connections With Great Smoky Mountains Scenic Drive

Chandler Brothers of Virginia were low bidders on the lower end of highway 284, which was let by the state highway commission last Friday.

Work is expected to start on the five-mile stretch of the highway within thirty days. The contract calls for grading, surfacing, and the small structures that will complete the road from the mouth of Looking Glass creek to the Boylston highway.

G. G. Page, construction engineer here, said Wednesday that he had not received notice of final acceptance by the federal bureau of public roads, but it is expected that this o. k. will be a matter of formality.

R. Gettys Browning, chief locating engineer for the state highway department, said Tuesday that he was sure the contract would receive approval of the federal bureau, which is sharing in cost of the construction.

When the lower five mile stretch is completed, sometime during the coming year, excellent connections will be given to Wagon Road Gap, where the line of the Scenic Parkway will run, and also with Waynesville and Canton, across the mountain, which will lessen time between the communities nearly one-half.

An official of the state office of the state highway department said Tuesday that contract on the Hayward county side of the mountain would in all probability be let before spring, and that he felt sure the route would be completed by the beginning of 1939.

The new road from Looking Glass creek to the Boylston highway at the Memorial Arch, does not cross Davidson River at any place, remaining on the north side all the way, and running between the Memorial Arch and the river at the entrance to the Boylston road.

Plans call for a double entrance where connection is made with 284, with the state taking over the plot of land which will not be utilized in building the two-prong entrance. This will insure an unobstructed view for traffic leaving or entering the Pisgah Forest road.

Fawn Farm and Fish Rearing Pictures Taken By National Producers

Pictures of the Pisgah National Forest fawn farm at the Pink Beds, and of the fish rearing pools on Davidson River, were made last week by the Paramount News photographers, and will be shown throughout the country in their regular news and feature release to theatres.

James B. Buchanan, representative of Paramount, spent a day in the forest, and took pictures of the planting of 10,000 trout which were placed in the streams of the forest, and also took pictures at the rearing pool plant.

The fawn farm, where 112 "little deer" have been raised this year, was also visited by the national news-picture man, and this will also be used as a part of the feature release.

The photographer was brought here by Clint Davis of the information bureau of the National Forestry Department, from Atlanta. He also had a photographer from the Atlanta Journal here who made pictures of the wild life in the forest for use in his publication.

All Citizens Asked To Join In Movement To Secure Adequate Postoffice Facilities Here

Concerted effort is being started by organized groups in the community to press the federal authorities to erect a postoffice building in Brevard.

Official action has been taken in the matter by the Brevard Chamber of Commerce, and the Brevard Kiwanis club. County and town boards, the Women's Civic club, American Legion, the Grange, and other organizations are being contacted with a view to enlisting their influence in the matter.

The Chamber of Commerce is taking the lead in the movement, and in addition to the organized groups in the community, is a king that citizens in general co-operate in the effort.

It is pointed out by the Chamber of Commerce that towns of less size than Brevard have been able to secure federal buildings during the past three or four years, and that inasmuch as nearly one-half of the population of the county is served by the Brevard office, that citizens in the county should also take an active interest.

A central group is being set up this week by the Chamber of Commerce to act as steering committee for the drive. This group will be named Thursday, and the Chamber of Commerce asked to approve it at the Friday night meeting. Dr. C. L. Newland, president of the Chamber of Commerce, said Wednesday that he was finding practically all people interested in the move, and that in his opinion citizens in general would lend their support.
