Methodist Conference Will Be Given Recommendation Of Special Committee

The Rev. J. H. Brendall, pastor of Brevard Methodist church, and the Rev. H. O. Huss, pastor of the Rosman-Brevard charge, are attending the Western Carolina conference in Asheville, which opened its session Wednesday afternoon.

The sessions will continue through the rest of the week, ending on Monday with reading of appointments. It is expected that the Rev. Mr. Huss will be returned to Rosman-Brevard charge, while it is not known for certain as to the return of the Rev., Mr. Brendall to Brevard. However, it is expected that the popular pastor will be moved to another pastorate.

Church leaders here are hoping that the popular pastor and his equally popular wife will be returned for their fourth year's work, but have no as-surance from the church officials that such will be the case.

An item of wide interest to Transylvania county people which will come up at the annual conference is a proposition as to disposal of the Davenport College property and holdings at

Trustees of Davenport in meeting last week in Charlotte voted to recommend the following resolution to the conference in regard to the $200,000 assets of the college which closed several years ago:

"The trustees of Davenport college in session on October 12, 1937, respectfuly petition the Western North Carolina conference in session in Asheville, October 20, to abandon all efforts to operate a school in Lenoir and to set up a board of trust whose duty it shall be to assemble all available assets of Davenport college and hold the same intact as a perpetual trust, the income of which endownment or trust fund shall be used perpetually to pay by loan or gift the expenses of young women in Methodist church schools, of Brevard high school was elected preferably in Greensboro College for Women at Greensboro or Brevard college at Brevard.

"The board further requests that F. C. Sherrill of Cornelius, chairman of the Davenport board of trustees, be made chairman of the board of trust, and that the board of trust, which will be set up will be constituted in lieu of the present board of trustees. It is further recommended that five members of the board of trust be selected from the present membership of the board of trustees of Davenport col-

Brevard College has only been in operation since the fall of 1984 and since that year the enrollment has increased each year.

It was impossible to accept all students this year who made applications to the college for entrance. The books were closed late in August, and according to Dr. E. J. Coltrane, many applicants had to be refused because of the lack of housing facilities here at the college.

It is hoped that in the near future as Brevard College continues to build, that additional domitories can be built and that the college will be able to accomodate five hundred students, boarding on the campus.

Many of the students this year are from North and South Carolina, but eight other states are represented in the student body. States outside of the Carolinas that have more students represented here are Virginia and Ten-Practically every county in North Carolina is represented in the group with many of the boys and girls being from the sister state South Carolina.

Elite Piggery Set Up At Brevard Store

A little black pig, whose ancestry is unknown, and whose future is very problematical, is resident elite in a new, neat, and nifty pen all to himself in the show window of the B&B Feed Company on East Main Street.

The black representative of Pigdom, is taking life easy, eating, sleeping, grunting, and otherwise just "being present" in the display pen which looks like the artistic work of Carl Bryson, ex-vocational student of Brevard high

Anyway the pig is there, live as can be, and apparently as happy as one could expect a pig to be.

There is plenty of corn handy for of Purina pig chow, a box of mineral, and a bucket of water, each item being placed just so-so for the piggy. Idea is to see just how much the pig will eat of each food during a certain period of time (until about Christmas), see how much it has gained since going on the select-a-bility pound of meat when the proper (the B&B Boys say that is the proper) food is given a pig.

The representative of the Pigdom is just plain pig . . . weighed 43 pounds when it was given its place in front-window society last Saturday, and the tall belief is that it MIGHT weigh 200 at Christmas-which is something to wait and see about . . . anyway, it's the B&B's pig, their feed, and their trouble, if the pig tops two pounds per day for the next six weeks, or if it loses two pounds per week.
