Parking Problem Is Studied By Aldermen

Matter of taking care of automobile parking this summer was subject of considerable discussion at the meeting of Brevard board of aldermen Monday night.

Streets are becoming crowded for parking space, members of the board and policemen pointed out, and the problem of just where to park cars during the day is a major problem.

Suggestion was made that business people who have been riding to work, parking for half day or all day, leave their cars off the street. The problem in such idea is to find suitable place for such people to leave their cars parked for any considerable period of time.

Easy way out, one of the board members said, would be to set up a two-hour parking rule, thus allowing people plenty of time to shop, see a show, or attend to business matters.

However, this was not accepted for the reason: "Just where would a man park if he needed to be in town longer than two hours."

The board members agreed that something would have to be worked out before the summer season, but just what the solution will be is still to be found.

Bus stop was designated by the board at the rear of Macfie Drug store, where two parking spaces will be marked off for a bus. When two buses arrive in Brevard at one time, one of the large carriers will pull into the vacant lot at rear of the drug store, in order to relieve congestion which has been noted when two of the large buses are parked on North Broad at the same time.
