Compulsory Training Will Hit All Types Businesses

Eight months' service period for the government for every able-bodied man in the country between the ages of 18 and 45 years of age is in the offing, if a bill introduced in congress last week passes—and it is generally presumed that the measure will pass within a few weeks.

The legislation providing for universal compulsory military training has for its purpose the "mobilization of the nation's strength by fitting "every able-bodied man into his proper place under a fair system of selective compulsory military training and service."

Not only may the "bosses" key executives, and skilled employees be called upon for an eight-month service period but they also may be called up for military training for one month out of each year for an additional 10-year period.

The bill provides for registration of all men between the ages of 18 and 65 with certain exemptions. Those between the ages of 18 and 45 would be liable for eight months military training and for national service.

Careful selection of men from those registered is provided for with due regard to the needs of industry and agriculture, the status of persons dependent upon a registrant, and other factors.

There is further provision that not more than 87 per cent nor less than 78 per cent of the men selected shall be between the ages of 21 and 31, not more than 15 per cent nor less than 10 per cent shall be between the ages of 31 and 38, and not more than seven per cent nor less than three per cent shall be between the ages of 38 and 45.

How the compulsory military training of men provided in the Burke bill will be squared with the earlier announced program of training 2,000,000 young men and women in the non-combatant functions having a military value has not yet been indicated.

The working out of the universal service plan has been placed under the direction of Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' union. The latter plan with its emphasis on youth and existing government agencies would not draw nearly as heavily on the business personnel of the country as would the Burke bill.

Three Brevard Men Attending Republican Convention This Week

Ralph Fisher, Lewis Hamlin, and Loalia Tinsley, of Brevard, are attending the national Republican convention in Philadelphia this week.

Mr. Fisher is alternate delegate from the 11th congressional district.

Principal business of the convention will be the nomination of president and vice president candidates, and adoption of party platform.

Former President Herbert Hoover, Wendell L. Wilkie, Senator Robert Taft, and Thomas Dewey were reported by radio Tuesday afternoon to be leading candidates for the nomination as presidential candidate, with possibility of several other leaders being in the fight for No. 1 post by Thursday.

The convention is expected to be over by Friday of this week. Highlights of the first day's meeting was the keynote address by Governor Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, who charged the New Deal with inefficiency, corruptness in handling of public monies by their lax methods, wasting of funds that should have been applied to national defense, and inability—charging that when time of real stress came they (the Democrats) had to reach out into the Republican party and get men to head the navy and war department.
