Smart Slacks Suit

Elegance for resort wear.

By VERA WINSTON

IT LOOKS like a general acceptance of the slacks suit since the stores are ordering it in every fabric, and style for work, for lounging and for smart wear. The suit shown comes under the latter category. The beautifully tailored slacks are of creamy white gabardine teamed up with a matching jacket that is nice with a skirt or over a dress. Here the jacket is worn with blouse of shocking pink crepe with a turquoise and white print. There is a pleated edge to the wide shawl collar.

Grow More Alfalfa For Excellent Hay

Alfalfa produces exceptionally high quality hay and larger total acre yields than other legumes, making it an excellent crop for planting to offset the existing feed shortage, says Dr. E. R. Collins, in charge of agronomy extension at State College.

Alfalfa can be grown on moderately-heavy, well-drained, and fertile upland soils throughout the state. It is not suited to bottom soils because it gets "wet feet" when the water table is high. It must be grown on good land because it is not a "poor land" crop.

Collins advises that now is the time to select the land for the sowing of the crop in September. Disk it with a "bush and bog" harrow, leaving as much of the vegetation on the surface as possible, and prepare to disk once or twice more before seeding.

A sample of the soil should be taken now and sent to the Soil Testing Laboratory at Raleigh for a recommendation on how much lime is needed for the crop. It should be applied immediately since limestone does not quickly neutralize soil acids.
