"There will also be thorough examination of infants to determine the presence of any disease and to keep a check on the development of the child. Formulas for feeding will be made and changed from time to time as conditions indicate.

"Cases," he said, "will be accepted only by reference from the family physician or cases handled by midwives. A report of the findings will be made to the family physicians after each examination is made."

FARM QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question: How should I cook meat for canning?

Answer: There are several ways to pre-cook meat for canning, says Mrs. Cornelia C. Morris, Extension Food Conservationist at State College. She recommends that if meat is to be cooked before it is canned, that it should not be more than half done. "It can be browned quickly in a small amount of hot fat in a frying pan; it can be roasted in an oven; or it can be stewed or boiled. Do not add salt to the meat until after it is packed in the jars," says Mrs. Morris. She also emphasizes that a pressure cooker is essential in canning meats and that other methods are not safe.

Question: What is the best period to rid cattle of lice?

Answer: Fall is the best season of the year to treat cattle for lice, says L. I. Case, Extension Animal Husbandman at State College. If the cattle are treated while the weather is still fairly warm and before they are put in winter quarters, this will prevent infesting the barn with the biting louse. Case suggests that two treatments be made, about 14 to 16 days apart. The first treatment gets the grown lice and the second treatment the lice which were not hatched at the first treatment.

EXPLANATION IS GIVEN

In a news story published in last week's issue of this paper, the name of Mrs. D. L. English did not refer to Mrs. D. L. English, wife of Judge English. The initials of the two persons are the same.
