WMC TO CHECK ALL EMPLOYERS

To Determine If They Are Complying With The New Stabilization Order

RALEIGH, Aug. 10 — A crew of representatives of the administrative office in Raleigh of the War Manpower Commission will start out on a canvass of employers in North Carolina to determine whether or not they are complying with the provisions of the WMC Employment Stabilization plan in operation in this state and region since May 15th.

Dr. J. S. Dorton, State WMC director, announces that the members of the crew will canvass areas on a prepared schedule by visiting the offices of plants essential and other than essential employers and checking their payrolls to see if workers added since May 15th have been employed in accordance with the provisions of the Labor Stabilization plan—specifically that they have statements of availability for all workers hired whose most recent previous employment was in an essential activity.

This canvass is being undertaken because of frequent reports that employers are not complying with the provisions of the Stabilization plan either because they do not understand it, or willfully, Dr. Dorton states. The investigation will continue until the entire State has been covered and all types of employers checked.

Your friends without specialized training are employed now because employers, in their desperation for help, have been forced to makeshift the best they can with untrained help. When the war ends, then will come the true test of the need for specialized business training.

Thousands of untrained people will find themselves without employment. Business managers will refuse to continue trying to get along with untrained help. Only those with specialized business training will be desired.

You can best serve your country and, at the same time protect your own future by taking time now for a business education. If you are interested in a permanent future,

Cecil's Business College urges young people not to attempt short courses or patronize cheap schools in order to secure employment now. Thousands of half-prepared stenographers and typists will be released from government offices after the war is over. Business will be readjusted on the basis of efficiency. Thousands of unsatisfactory employees will be taken off the payroll.
