Action is imperative. Teachers need to get together not only among themselves, but with others in the community, to get to the bottom of these problems, to understand them, and with the combined help of all, to actually reverse our educational effort to meet them.

Some of the outstanding of these problems, as brought out by Miss Paulukas, were those of the nursery schools, adult education, making education active and broader than the mere use of textbooks allow, technical training in a more inclusive training program, and a thorough training in government and civic responsibility.

"It is unreasonable to hope," stated Mr. Greene, "that we can, as soon as the war is won, return to those conditions that existed prior to Pearl Harbor. The world has become a much smaller place, and we have learned that we cannot disregard what other people do. Our children must learn to understand the rest of the world and its problems, and to realize that to keep liberty and equality for ourselves, we must be willing to share it.

At this meeting, the ninth in a series of meetings to be held throughout the state, Mr. Greene urged the support of all teachers of the Federal Aid for Education bill (S6-37) and requested that they back that support by getting in touch with Senators Reynolds and Bailey.

"North Carolina is taking steps forward in the field of education," stated Mr. Greene, "but we must gain more strength, and the way to gain that strength is through unity."

Mrs. H. N. Blake. It was considered by the men leaders that a labor swapping ring be worked out in the respective neighborhoods and that farmers cooperating in such a ring, get together during the year and plan their work in such a manner as to be able to help each other at the time the extra labor might be needed. Improved pasture was next of importance and more suitable storage space for home foods. Cellars and bank storage are rating high on the list of neighborhood needs and judging from the discussions in the neighborhood meetings that have already been held, many farm homes are going to have such storage space that have long been needed.
