A STRAY BEAR CREATED LOT OF EXCITEMENT SUN.

Number of Persons in Pisgah Forest Area In Search For Animal

"The bear went over the mountain . . ."

The particular bear in question was one that caused more excitement in the Pisgah Forest section Sunday just about church time than a three-ring circus would have caused.

Seems that a large black bear was seen along the edge of the woods near the Davis place in rear of the new school house, and soon every man around who had a single-shot .22 or a 306, double-barrel shotgun, and in a few exceptions pistols, turned out to get a shot at the bruin that had evidently left his habitat in Pisgah National Forest and came down to see how people on the "other side of the mountain" were getting along.

There were dogs a-barking and a-trailing, young men along the Boylston road, older ones along the east side of the Davis woods, and a sprinkling of all ages along the Wave Morris road.

However, the bear evidently knew just what he was doing and just how to get away from the small army, because he is said to have (judging by tracks found later in the afternoon) walked right by the new Buck McCall residence up the steep highway bank, and back into his haven in the forest, leaving those chaps who felt certain he would come along via lower ground still waiting and hungry for bear meat that is probably feasting today on acorns and grubs which are said to be plentiful just inside the government boundary line.

Which is the most fattening food—a big, juicy apple, a large orange, a medium sized baking powder biscuit, or a medium sized baked potato? The home economists say "they are all the same."

CONGRATULATIONS to the Newspapers of America

ONCE more the free press of America has shown its ability to aid in overcoming the shortage of an essential war material.

This country faced an acute shortage of pulpwood. We users of pulpwood, faced with increasing wartime demands for our products, realized the disastrous effect on our war and home front economics if the shortage of our raw materials continued. This problem, so vast in scope, so threatening in nature, had to be brought to the attention of every man, woman and child in pulpwood-producing areas. The job had to be done quickly if the downward trend of production was to be reversed in time.

To help turn the tide, the Newspapers of America have responded as only the Free Press of a Free People could. They have given their time, effort and space to make people understand how much we needed pulpwood—and why.

This whole campaign is an inspiring example of initiative and imagination. It is beginning to work, and we in this industry are glad to acknowledge the help it has been to us in meeting the nation's need for pulpwood products. We are happy to carry on with the newspapers, and to do everything we can to make their drive a success.
