SUPPLY OF MILK NOW IS ADEQUATE

Transylvania Dairies Has A Surplus To Furnish New Customers

After two or three years of diligent and continuous work among the farmers in this county, Ralph Parrish, manager of the Transylvania Dairies, said yesterday the supply of milk had been enlarged to the point where he is now in position to take care of all present demands with a surplus remaining to provide for increased consumption in this territory.

Mr. Parrish saw in this development a result of the intensive effort that has been made in this county to promote an ambitious livestock program along with a diversified system of crops.

Most of the milk obtained by the local dairy comes from Transylvania farms, but a small amount is imported to insure an adequate supply of grade A milk.

Mr. Parrish pointed out in this connection that in many parts of the country milk is growing scarce due to a number of factors related directly to the war, chief of which is the labor situation and the increasing price of feeds.

"We have worked hard to encourage our farmers to produce milk as an integral part of their farming operations," Mr. Parrish said. "As a result of this patient and persistent effort, we have in this county today more milk than we actually need while in some other parts of the country there is a growing scarcity."
