Organization Works Directly With Physicians And Hospital Staffs

Mrs. Harold H. Norwood, Brevard field representative for Hospital Saving association of Chapel Hill, announces this week that the approved Blue Cross and Blue Shield plan has been devised into a "community health service program" by doctors and hospitals of the state as a means for North Carolina families to budget for hospital and surgical protection.

In discussing the Blue Cross-Blue Shield program, Mrs. Alfred Perkins, superintendent of Transylvania Community hospital, states that she has found this one of the best insurances and one most readily settled, which is a great help to a small hospital with a limited staff.

Mrs. Norwood further pointed out that the organization works directly with the hospitals and physicians. A contract is made with the hospital to give certain types or classes of service to Blue Cross members at a fixed price agreeable to the hospital and the association.

Agent Lists Steps To Stop Barn Flies

A four-point program to save barns from destruction by fire during November was suggested here this week by J. A. Glazener, county agent for the State College Extension Service.

Mr. Glazener said records of the Fire Protection Institute show that approximately 1,500 barns in the United States were either damaged or destroyed by fire in November, 1947. Losses are unusually heavy during fall and winter months because so many harvest crops and so much valuable farm machinery are stored in barns at that season of the year.

"If farmers will take a few simple precautions and install approved fire extinguishers, barns in this county will be comparatively safe from fire during the winter months," the county agent declared.

He said barn losses from fire can be reduced 80 to 90 per cent through the following program:

1. Keep barns clean. Make sure rubbish is not allowed to accumulate in or around buildings.
2. Check all electrical wiring. See that switches operate properly and no wiring has been stripped of its insulation.
3. Have adequate fire protection. Most fires start small. If approved fire extinguishers are handy, fires can be put out quickly, before they get out of control.
4. Store flammable liquids in sealed containers and out of reach of children and animals.
