

COUNTY OVER TOP IN BOND DRIVE

Expect To Have County Roads In Best Shape

EXTENSIVE WORK NOW BEING DONE ON FIRST PHASE

Seven Routes Are Receiving Traffic Bound Macadam Base Course By Crews

THREE DIVISIONS

Work on improvement of the county road system with the bond money is proceeding nicely, a survey yesterday reveals, and with good weather during August and September, roads in Transylvania are expected to be in the best condition ever for the coming winter.

Extensive work is being done on the first phase of the improvement program in Transylvania. Seven of these roads are receiving now what is known as the traffic bound macadam base course—commonly called stone. Highway officials say these roads will be blacktopped by the first of November. Blacktopping will be started in the near future.

Roads Named

These roads are divided into three projects: the first being the Neely road, running from North Brevard to the Greenville highway. It is the only one which is 18 feet wide, and it is closed to traffic for approximately 30 days.

Roads in the second project of the first phase are: Green Acre road, Everett road, Little River road, Country Club road and Elm Bend road. These are open to traffic, although there might be some delay due to the work now in progress.

The third project includes the Reasonover road at Cedar Mountain and the East Fork road. Both of these will be 12 feet wide. The East Fork road is now being graded by state forces, and should be ready for stone in a short time.

Dickerson, Inc., of Monroe, was given the contract to blacktop the roads in Transylvania, and crews of the concern are now busy preparing the roads for this work.

Attorney Authorized To Arrange Bond Sales; Bids Are Asked For

The board of aldermen at a call meeting held Friday night engaged in exhaustive discussion of plans to enlarge and improve the waterworks and sewerage system here with J. A. Buchanan, representing the John J. Harte Construction company, which will supervise the two projects.

The town attorney was authorized to arrange for sale of bonds as needed for the program. Plans for the expansion of the waterworks have been submitted to the state board of health for approval.

Mayor S. E. Varner has given notice that bids for the waterworks improvements will be received at the city hall until 2 p. m. on August 22. Clerk T. H. Barker said yesterday that bids on the sewerage project would probably be called for soon after work on the waterworks starts. The two projects are expected to entail an outlay of around $500,000.

Plans for the waterworks call for the construction of two 1,000,000-gallon storage tanks. The present reservoir will continue to be used and covered, Mr. Barker said. Mr. Buchanan told council members that the three reservoirs would furnish the town with plenty of water for any contingency and to take care of future needs.

Plans and specifications for the waterworks are on file in the office of the town clerk here and at the Harte company at 284 Techwood avenue, northwest, Atlanta, Ga.

Contractors who submit bids are required to tender a check in the sum of not less than five per cent of their bid and a guarantee that if the bid is accepted a contract will be entered into and the performance thereof properly secured. In the notice asking for bids, Mayor Varner reserved the right to reject any proposals submitted.

Mrs. Allie B. Harlee, who served the local draft board as secretary during World War II, will act in the same capacity during the present emergency, Oliver H. Orr, acting chairman, said yesterday. Dewey Winchester is the other member of the board.

Mr. Orr said yesterday that all of the records of the board are still in Asheville and that he has received no instructions from any source relative to drafting men. Larger counties in which the boards continued to function were asked to supply the men for the first draft and 1,525 Tar Heels are scheduled to be called in September. It is estimated that it will be necessary to examine 5,200 men to obtain this number.

Mr. Orr said yesterday that he was expecting to receive word any day now from Col. T. H. Upton, state draft director, to set up the draft machinery in this county.

Mr. Waldrop and his wife in the suit asserted that the town was maintaining a nuisance in the city dump. They asked for damages of $2,500 and elimination of the alleged nuisance.
