INTEREST MOUNTS IN TV TOWER ON PISGAH MOUNTAIN

Hearing Is Slated In Asheville Next Tuesday. Project Is Outlined

Interest in the proposal to erect a TV tower on Mt. Pisgah is gaining momentum here and in other Western North Carolina counties, and many groups and individuals are expected to testify at a hearing in the Asheville city hall next Tuesday morning, Feb. 2, at 10:00 o'clock.

Objections to the use of Pisgah have been filed and the U. S. Department of Agriculture forest service, and a large number of groups and individuals are expected to testify for or against the proposal.

The Brevard chamber of commerce directors have gone on record as favoring the erection of the tower on Mt. Pisgah.

Charles B. Britt, of Station WLOS, Asheville, in a statement this week, said the erection of a television transmitter on Mt. Pisgah would not change the physical appearance of the mountain.

"There will be no change on the top of Mt. Pisgah other than the erection of the transmitting tower. All new construction, access roads, and power lines will be shielded from view from the proposed Blue Ridge Parkway which goes over part of Mt. Pisgah. The only visible evidence of this TV station will be the tower.

"Six months of engineering study by experts prove conclusively that technically Mt. Pisgah is far superior to any other available site.

"WLOS will provide an additional means of access to the top of Mt. Pisgah for the use of the forestry service, thereby making this valuable scenic attraction more accessible.

"WLOS will construct on its tower an observation platform at the 20-foot level for use of the general public and will maintain this platform at its own expense."
