New Kitchen Of Tomorrow Shown By General Motors

They called it an out-of-this-world type of kitchen—the very new one that was featured by the General Motors Motorama show in New York last week.

This fascinating kitchen of tomorrow is still in the experimental stage with no present plans for production. It certainly is something for the modern homemaker to dream about. Just by the mere flick of the wrist one pushes buttons which make ovens move into place, toasters and mixers rise out of the counter tops and canister racks slide out of sight.

Those who have an eye for beauty and who love color will be particularly interested in this kitchen. It's done in walnut wood, with small accents of white metal, turquoise and bright orange. An island counter holds the sink, dishwasher and garbage disposal unit. The cooking facilities are yellow and consist of a top burner unit flanked by two ovens, either of which can be raised to waist height to use. Those who like the new and novel will be intrigued by these ovens. One of them is a simulated electronic model—not yet available—which would bake foods in a matter of seconds. The other oven has a special device which wafts charcoal or hickory smoke into meats. This should appeal to the man of the house, since most of the menfolk seem to enjoy these flavors.

These are just a few of the new features in this kitchen of the future. There are ever so many other things—like spice canisters that stick to the wall with magnets, a pushbutton dispenser that provides a choice of ice cubes, crushed ice or cold water, and an electric mixer and an electric beverage blender that rise out of counter tops. Oh, yes, and there's also a 4-slice toaster that comes up from the range top. These all appear at the press of a button.

Like magic, overhead cabinet doors drop down when a hand is waved in front of them. All of the oven and cabinet doors except the overhead ones slide open at the touch.

NEW TYPE DISHES

The new plastic dinnerware is prettier than ever. In many homes it now is being used for informal entertaining as well as for family meals every day. Its practical qualities—fireproof, unbreakable, heat resistant—are well known. The news this year is in the beautiful new colors and designs, which almost belie its synthetic nature. There's an even greater variety of shapes in plastic ware. While the round coupe silhouette prevails, extra pieces like creamers and salad bowls often appear in almost abstract designs. Colors are gay and bright or subdued and subtlet and can be mixed easily with gratifying results.

Charter Members Of Kiwanis Club Are Honored On 29th Anniversary

Brown Carr, Julian Glazener, Lewis Hamlin, Alex Kizer and Joe Tinsley were applauded for continuing their membership through the years, and Fred Johnson and Anthony Trantham were special guests of the club. These two men were charter members.

Prof. J. B. Jones gave a brief history of the club, and Dr. C. L. Newland told of some of the many worthy projects which the club had completed during the 28 years. Dean Stevenson, chairman of the Kiwanis education committee had charge of the program.

During the business session, plans were made for the club to have charge of the dime board for infantile paralysis benefit on the last Friday and Saturday of the month, with Ray Hooper as chairman.

A club bulletin board was displayed by Julian Glazener which had been donated by Mrs. Loraine Neal and David Norton.

The answer is "yes," and it's a simple trick. A few treatments of liquid wax applied sparingly will save both clothes and bag.

Broadcaster Is Highly Praised At Press Conference

Brevard high school's newspaper, the "Broadcaster," was discussed and received highly complimentary praise at a Western North Carolina Press conference, which was held in Asheville recently.

It was compared with several other high school newspapers in this district, among them being the Brevard college "Clarion." The speaker at the conference said that the "Broadcaster" shows ease of writing and professional ability.

The Waynesville "Mountaineer" said in an editorial published on Monday, January 11, that the Brevard high school department of journalism is growing and already showing the development of talent. It further said that the "Broadcaster" is a credit to any institution many times larger.

The "Mountaineer" said also that journalism courses in many schools seem to be definite on the upgrade, and of interest and benefit to the students who are given the opportunity to take these courses.

Rapid advancement is being made in science. Until lately we could only hear static. TV has made it possible to see it.

Hundreds of Visitors Approve New Hospital Wing

We wish to thank everyone, who following the formal dedication of the new Harry H. Straus wing to the local hospital last Sunday afternoon, toured the structure. We appreciate very much the generous comments of those who made the tour. Their evident interest in the hospital is symbolic of the spirit and purpose which made the addition possible.

The new wing practically doubles the capacity of the local hospital. It is modern and complete in every respect and incorporates the latest improvements in hospital design and equipment.

The people of Transylvania county have every reason to be proud of their enlarged hospital and we feel their sentiments are a compliment to our skill as builders.
