LAUNCH CAMPAIGN LOWER FIRE LOSS

Business Firms Join In Effort; A & P Offers Smokey Bear Belt To Youths

It's time to get outdoors again and the annual campaign by the forestry division of the U. S. Department of Agriculture to prevent forest fires is being stepped up.

This year an effort is being made to enlist the cooperation of the nation's youths as well as adults. Business firms also are being called upon to help. For example, arrangements have been completed for full color display pieces depicting an appeal by Smokey Bear, official symbol of the fire prevention campaign, to be displayed in A & P stores across the land.

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company also is cooperating in the campaign to enlist the cooperation of the nation's youths by offering a Smokey Bear belt as a premium in its stores in conjunction with the purchase of Ann Page brand of beans or prepared spaghetti. Each youth who obtains one of these is eligible to receive an official Junior Forest Ranger kit from Smokey Bear headquarters in Washington, D. C.

Although the Smokey Bear symbol was conceived in 1945, according to Clinton Davis, director of forest fire prevention for the forestry division, it was not adopted by the forestry division as a central figure until 1947, and has been used extensively ever since. There was an average of 210,000 forest fires annually prior to the inauguration of the Smokey Bear campaign. Since then the number has been reduced to an average of 185,000, even though thousands of additional people visit forest and woodland areas every year for picnics, camping, hunting and fishing expeditions.

If it were not for the extensive fire prevention program, of which the Smokey Bear symbol is the central figure, Davis estimates the number of fires would be running at the rate of between 300,000 and 350,000 annually because of increased use of forest areas. Because fires caused by people run in direct proportion to forest use by the public, we are grateful for as widespread support as possible to bring home the need for keeping down the huge annual loss of our natural resources by fires, he said.
