Flower GARDENING

By Mrs. S. R. Harrington

(Omitted Last Week)

An iris is a lovely thing, but not so delicate as lupine in full bloom; Though pinks and pansies held their sunlit spot, They cannot match the heliotrope's perfume; And if bleeding heart is graceful, still It's dripping radiance may not compete With memories of tulip, daffodil Or crocus here beside the garden seat. Each has its special beauty. If one choose Cleome or larkspur as the loveliest, Could one be certain that the early rose Is not, when all is said and done, the best? Far better with each day to take one's pleasure Impartially from all the garden's treasure.

The last two lines of the poem is good advice. For, if you're like me, you love all of them—each has a beauty all their own.

GARDENING: When roses start to slow down on flowering, perk them up with fertilizer, and be sure to soak it in. Keep the dead flower heads picked or cut off. Cultivate very shallow, and place mulch around the base of roses. Plant more gladioli at this time, and at two week intervals until the latter part of July.

If you have a nice shady place out-of-doors, you could plunge potted plants there for summer. Be sure to water regularly and keep them sprayed to repel insects.

June is the month that chinch bugs or Japanese beetles are, or have been, at work. They have usually done the damage when the brown spots appear, but other areas could, and should, be protected. Chinch bugs kill grass by sucking out the juices. The Japanese beetle grubs kill grass by eating the roots.

A ten per cent DDT dust will kill both insects.

Six pounds per one thousand square feet of lawn is the needed amount. Put on just before a rain, or soak in with the garden hose.

In buying, you might ask your dealer's advice about sprays or dusts for chinch bugs and Japanese beetles. Fifty per cent wettable chlordane is good.

For other garden subjects such as rhododendron or azaleas, spray with a nicotine or rotenone spray. Keep all dead wood cut out of shrubs, trees, etc.

Save seeds of the early blooming flowers, and plant right away, the earlier the better.

June brings roses—and foremost in gardeners minds when roses are mentioned is the beautiful rose garden at the home of Brevard's rose king, Aston Heath! Many other lovely flowers at the Heath home, too.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Jenkins grow marvelous roses, too. The beautifully landscaped grounds, the magnificent trees and lovely lawn all add up to "a dream picture."

Have you ever seen the superb potted plants and the many other splendid flowers Mrs. Porter Tins-
