Variety Tests Check On Small Grain Production

Evaluation trials of small grain varieties are conducted each year on farmer fields by the North Carolina Agriculture Experiment Station. According to F. W. Brittain, research instructor in charge of variety testing at North Carolina State College, performance of commercially available and prospective varieties of oats, wheat and barley are tested each year.

Brittain says that seasonal conditions vary from year to year, and therefore a variety that appears to be excellent for a single year may not prove to be consistently superior to other test varieties. He states that records of these years duration present a better basis for choosing varieties that are more likely to excel consistently. Only those varieties, adds Brittain, tested for three consecutive years (1954, 1955, and 1956) are compared in published tables.

Since small grains occupy a relatively small acreage in the mountain counties, says Brittain, official variety tests are not conducted in this area. However, small grain breeding programs use the Mountain Research Station near Waynesville to evaluate prospective new varieties for winter hardiness and cold tolerance. In conjunction with this project, a small variety test is conducted and used as a basis for recommending small grain varieties for the mountain counties.

Brittain adds that summaries of small grain performance for 1956, covering three consecutive years, have recently been published in mimeographed form by the Department of Field Crops at North Carolina State College as Research Report No. 1, dated July, 1956.

Griffin Faces Several Charges Following Chase

Norman Griffin, suspicioned of carrying a load of "white lightning", led local officers on a wild chase Saturday night before being apprehended beyond Keystone camp near Bracken's creek.

Griffin was stopped on Caldwell street about 10:00 o'clock Saturday night by Police Chief Paul Fisher. When asked to open the trunk of his car, he said the keys were at his home. As the patrol car turned to follow, the Brevard colored man "turned on the gas", and tried to out-run the local officers.

According to Chief Fisher, who followed in hot pursuit, the Griffin car side-swiped one belonging to Willie Smith beyond Morgan street. Griffin was arrested when he failed to make a curve near Bracken's creek and the patrol car blocked him from returning to the highway.

He was tried before Mayor John A. Ford Monday morning, and was released on a $1,000 bond of charges of possession, transporting, speeding, and hit and run driving.

On Saturday morning, October 13, the Lutheran Church of the Good Shepherd will begin Saturday morning church school, offering studies, music, recreation and handwork activity to children from grades one through seven.

The schedule is as follows: 9:00 to 9:50, study period; 9:50 to 10:25, music period; 10:25 to 10:45, recess with refreshments being served by the women of the Church;

10:45 to 11:30, handwork or study period, the pastor states.

The teachers will be: Rev. Keith J. Beam, Mrs. Jane H. Beam, Mrs. Nell B. Norman, Miss Wilma J. Waters and Mrs. Hilda N. Hardin.

"We sincerely encourage the parents of the congregation, including the friends of the congregation, to see to it that all children have the opportunity and privilege to attend the Saturday church school," Mr. Beam said.

America by 1975 will be a land in which business expenditures on plant and equipment probably will be about double what they are today.

The National Association of Manufacturers cites a 1954 study of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report (Federal) which discusses this expected development:

The report, taking 1965 as a goal year, says in part:

"... Business expenditures on plant and equipment are assumed to amount to $60 billion per year by 1965 compared to $38 billion in 1953. This probably implies a more rapid annual rate of modernization or productive facilities than now prevails and probably a considerable opportunity to decentralize or disperse industry both as a means of reducing the vulnerability of our industrial plants in case of war and as a contribution toward improved working, traveling, and living conditions for employees."

Lutherans Will Hold Supper On Saturday Night
