Humane Society To Purchase Site For An Animal Shelter

JACK GRAVELLY, forester of the Georgia-Pacific Lumber company, covering several counties in Western North and South Carolina, is the new president of the Brevard Lions Club who succeeds Guy Burchfield, and installation of new officers is set for the third Thursday night in June. (See story, page 5, first section)

Group Making Plans To Raise $5,000. Facilities To Be Constructed

Directors of the Transylvania Humane society have agreed to purchase a site for an animal shelter.

Located about five miles from Brevard just off the Rosman highway, the site is said to be ideal, since part of it is in bottomland and the remainder is a wooded hillside. There are some one and one-half acres in the tract, and electricity is available. Water will be supplied by a mountain stream.

Officials of the humane society are now looking forward to erection of a building on the site to house animals.

Plans call for separate cat and dog sections, with fenced-in runs for exercising. The site will be landscaped, and plans also call for parking facilities.

The society depends upon donations to finance its operation and there are no paid officials. In order to build the animal shelter and make other improvements, a campaign to raise $5,000 is being conducted.

Smathers, Local Archery Champ, Leaves To Compete In Tourneys

Brevard's O. K. Smathers, who holds both the state and Southeastern archery titles, leaves Thursday for Nashville, Ind., and the famed Brown County Tournament.

This is the 19th year the tourney has been held in the same place and Mr. Smathers points out that in past years many of the winners have gone on to cop the national title.

It is an open invitational tourney and is considered a warm-up for national and international competitions in archery.

During the week of June 2 Mr. Smathers will spend in Chicago, Ill., as courtesy of the American Archery company.

On June 8 and 9 Mr. Smathers will travel to Minneapolis, Minn., for the famed "Eliminations" tournament. The two top men and women archers who win this tournament will be sent to compete in the international tourney in Prague in July.

Mr. Smathers says there will be archers from 18 to 20 countries competing and an American has never been fortunate enough to win it. The last tourney of this nature was held in 1955.

Since he leaves for Indiana this Thursday, Mr. Smathers will not be able to defend his North Carolina state crown at Charlotte this week end.

However, he feels he will be ably represented by his daughter and son, Lynne and Kenny.

And local people agree with him, since Lynne won top honors in the girls' intermediate class last year, and Kenny won junior honors.
