TOWN INSTALLS NEW WATER LINE

A new, six-inch, cast iron water main installation has been completed in the recently annexed business and commercial area just north of the old city limits, and the "blow-off" and test of this line is being inspected by Tom Henry, town manager, and John Kilpatrick, maintenance superintendent. Floyd Gray, water department employee, can be seen in the ditch inspecting the last fitting on the line for leaks. This line represents the first six-inch mechanical joint water main to be laid by town forces. The last was installed on contract in 1951-'52, under the bond issue. According to Mr. Henry, a considerable saving was made when the pipe and fittings were purchased from the foundry. "It is our hope that through better engineering practices, direct quantity purchasing and more efficient operation that the town will continue to raise its level of services," Mr. Henry said.
