The first session of the American Red Cross Aquatic school for the 1962 season is now underway at beautiful Camp Carolina.

The 10-day school opened on Tuesday, with Bill McDonald in charge.

Harry Kenning, who has been directing the school here for many years, is serving as program director this session.

Jack Evans and Lloyd Gross are the associate directors. A new course has been added this year, dealing with teaching handicapped children to swim.

Two local girls, Patsy McClure and Jackie Gillespie, are volunteer office workers for the school.

More than 150 persons are attending the event.

The second session of the Aquatic school is scheduled in August, immediately following the summer camping session of Camp Carolina.
