Library Exhibit Unique

Mrs. Alan Wallace, exhibits chairman of Friends of the Library, announces that the "WHAT IS IT" exhibit of household gadgets is continuing at the county library.

She states that many visitors have enjoyed guessing the use of these contraptions, ranging from a foot warmer to be used in a buggy, lent by Mrs. John Reeves, to a peach peeler belonging to Mrs. Quentin Cantrell, and an envelope sealer lent by Mrs. James Morrow.

In addition to this exhibit, other exhibits of general interest have been added. In keeping with the North Carolina Tercentenary celebration this month is the exhibit of dolls. Every example in this interesting collection was made in this state.

The western mountain section is represented by the corn husk dolls, a Cherokee Indian doll and a fine example of an interesting old "poppet" doll with face carved from hickory-nut wood, as well as the hickory-nut dolls with their quizzical expressions.

From the Piedmont section are several Moravian dolls made at and around Old Salem. These have charming quaintness with their realistically painted faces and beautifully fashioned

Judge So Orders

Brevard Junior, Senior High Schools Completely Integrated

Judge Wilson Warlick ruled Monday in district court in Asheville that the 22 Negro junior and senior high school students in Transylvania would go to the Brevard schools this fall instead of the Hendersonville Negro high school.

Those who desire to do so may continue to go to the Ninth avenue high school in Hendersonville.

However, he made no ruling on the elementary schools in Brevard which are expected to remain segregated. Negro students in grades first through the eighth will continue to go to the Rosewald school here as in the past.

Last year Ruben J. Dailey, Asheville attorney, petitioned the courts to admit all 40 Negro junior and senior high school students to the Brevard schools. The courts ruled that eight be permitted to attend during the 1962-'63 term.

Much Waste

Town Is Facing Crisis In Water System, Help Asked

By Staff Writer

The Town of Brevard and Transylvania county are beginning the greatest period of growth since 1939. And with this growth it is trading on the brink of disaster unless steps are taken to prevent it.

This is the opinion of the Board of Aldermen and other town officials.

The problem is water — too little and too much. Too little water to take care of the continued growth of the county, and too much in the sewage treatment plant.

The engineers who designed the present sewage plant stated that it should meet the needs of a town of 10,000 people provided water meters were installed. The sewage plant is almost worn out because it has been over-worked, the officials state.

Studies by the Town reveal that the average family uses about 5,000 gallons of water per month. It further reveals that many families are using as much as 19,000 gallons per month, while others are using as little as 500 gallons per month. Yet all of these families pay the flat rate of $4.00 per month for water and sewer service.

Officials feel that only an adequate metering system will eliminate this waste. Meters will compel water users to fix leaky faucets and water closets, eliminate the running faucet in winter time, and reduce other forms of waste.

They point out that water meters will not mean increased rates, that for many families the water bill be reduced. But it does mean that each family would pay for the amount of water they used.

If something is not done about the situation, officials point out that a new sewage plant will have to be built and a new water supply developed in the very near future at a cost of more than a quarter million dollars.

They believe that water meters will save this expense, that they will reduce the threat of water shortage in time of drought, and that they will delay the day when the present water supply must be expanded.

The Board of Aldermen is trying to face the problem squarely. At the March meeting, it adopted a resolution calling for the issue of $13,000 bonds to cover partially the costs of installing water meters.

This is a progressive step and merits the support of the public.
