In Sherwood Forest

Brad Hawkins To Conduct Program, Audubon Colony

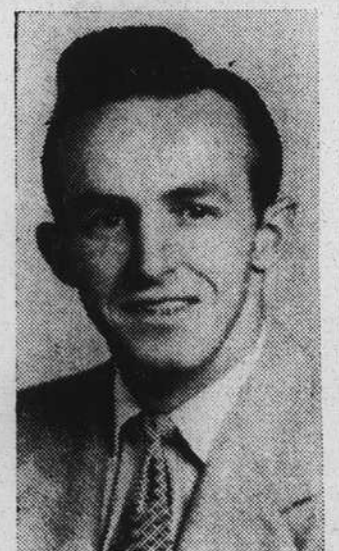

The Audubon Colony at Sherwood Forest on Cedar Mountain will present an outstanding full-color slide program next Monday, August 12, at 3:00 p.m. entitled, "A Walk in the Woods", with both photography and narration by H. Brad Hawkins, director of the Junior Museum at Greensboro.

Mr. Hawkins' presentation is one of the Audubon Nature Theater Series at Sherwood Forest which is bringing some of the nation's top naturalists and photographers to Western North Carolina for the first time this summer. His excellent pictures will illustrate the rich and varied plant and animal life which can be seen in North Carolina, from the rhododendron of the mountains to the Venus-fly-trap of the coast. Through the magic of the close-up camera, you will get an "insect-eye" view of nature's boundless beauty.

Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins and their family are spending most of this month at the Audubon Colony where he is serving as resident naturalist in charge of field trips and special activities. Mr. Hawkins, a former National Park Service Naturalist, is a member of the Association of Interpretive Naturalists, the Southeastern Museum Conference, and the Carolina Bird Club. He also serves on the education committee of the North Carolina Wildlife Federation. His direction at the Greensboro —Turn to Page Eight
