Survey Made Of Various Departments

Good schools are the birthright of American children, and this is a good time to reflect on their importance as the 43rd American Education week is being observed.

Since the end of World War II, vast progress has been made in the educational system of Transylvania county, and leaders in the field of education here are focusing the attention of the public on the additions and the improvements.

American Education week is an occasion for intensifying public interest in the schools, interpreting needs and stimulating community action in making improvements. No other cause is more deserving of special consideration by the American people than American Education Week.

Concerning the local situation today, Mrs. Hilda Olsen, the county supervisor, has this to say:

"Transylvania county schools extend to students a wide and varied curriculum. Civilization demands more specialized training in all fields and fewer jack-of-all trades people.
