Financially, the past year was a good one for most residents of Transylvania county and they spent their money accordingly.

As a result, retail merchants had a banner year. Nearly all of them were able to report substantial gains over 1962.

Sales of cars, food, furniture, clothing, drugs and other items were at a high level.

The facts and figures on the local spending performance come from a nationwide survey made by the Standard Rate and Data Service. It shows how much was spent for various commodities by people in each section of the country.

Bradburn Announces

Vocational Program In Schools To Be Expanded

In keeping with its goal to provide each pupil with the opportunity to develop to the maximum of his individual interests and capacity, the Transylvania County School System will broaden its vocational program for the next school year, Supt. C. W. Bradburn announces.

Authorization of state funds has been received from the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction to add four new vocational teachers in the county beginning with the 1964 - '65 school year.

Two vocational agriculture teachers and two home economics teachers have been providing training in these fields for a number of years. In the past, federal restrictions have limited these instructors to specific farm and home training. These restrictions have been liberalized to include instruction in farm and home related instructions —giving much breadth to this program.

The Industrial Cooperative

Training program started two years ago, offering a two year program of cooperative school and on-the-job training in skills and apprenticeable trades to 11th and 12th grade pupils, will be continued.

Classes in Introduction to Vocations offered for the first time at Brevard junior high last year, will be continued — providing 9th grade pupils with an introduction to the possible occupational choices that may be available to provide them with a livelihood when they have completed high school.

New positions allotted for the 1964-'65 school year include: one teacher for Brevard junior high school to allow for a team approach to vocational education. Units are to be planned that would correlate subjects such as Mathematics, English and Social Studies into a practical vocational approach to those high school pupils not planning to go to college when they have completed high school. —Turn To Page Five
