US Forest Service, Management Story

One of the purposes of this column is to inform you how the U. S. Forest Service manages the many resources found on National lands. This week the spotlight falls on one of special interest to most people, our forest wildlife.

What is being done to manage wildlife populations in the Pisgah Ranger District? Actually, nothing is done with the various species of animals themselves, for the wildlife practices which are used deal more with the habitat. By manipulating the habitat to produce optimum food and cover, wildlife species will have a better opportunity to prosper.

Wildlife ecologists have shown that large tracts of mature timber offer slim pickings for forest creatures, and that in nature, it is only where an opening in the forest occurs that the majority of wild animals is to be found. The wildlife management system on the Pisgah District helps nature along by creating openings in the forest canopy.

The majority of these openings and Saturdays at 9:00 a.m. by Mr. Hawkins during his stay at Sherwood Forest Audubon Colony.

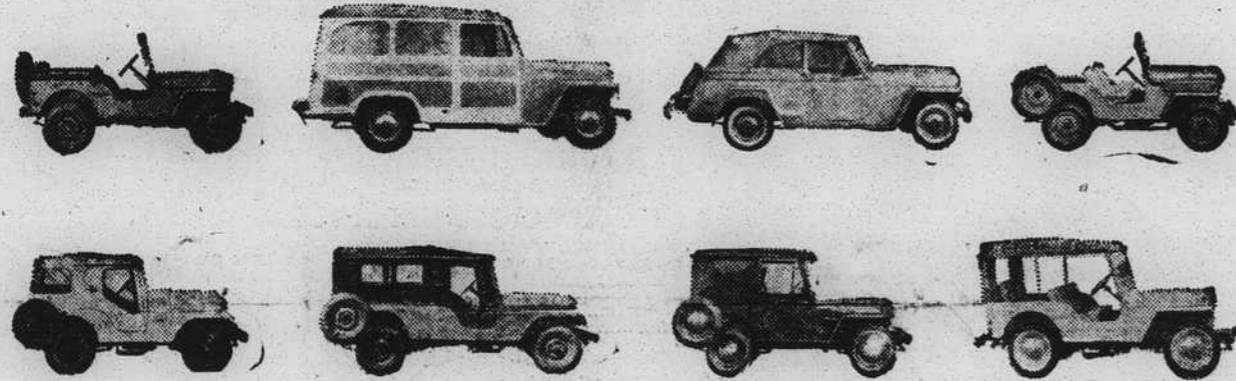

ings is made in conjunction with controlled timber sales. By careful removal of timber in an area, the food and cover available can be considerably increased. Logging roads on these sales are utilized to increase food supplies by seeding them with grain bearing grasses.

One of the benefits of wise timber harvesting and constant fire protection is the continuous supply of high quality water in the streams. These cold clean waters form the precise habitat needed for trout survival. If it were not for this protection, trout fishing could very well become a thing of the past.

Each year more and more people visit the Pisgah Ranger District to fish, hunt, and for just plain enjoyment. As this pressure increases, more demands will be made on our wildlife populations.

Since today's intensive wildlife management program on the National Forest is geared to tomorrow's demand, you, the public, can always be assured of an enjoyable and profitable time on your public lands. (DBS)

Evolution

Revolution

The world-famous army 'Jeep' vehicle started it all. Then came the evolutionary changes. Sensible changes. Like more ground clearance. Stronger suspension. Weather proof tops. Fun changes. Like pink and white striped upholstery. Fringed surrey tops. Lively colors. A sports roadster. A station wagon — rugged, durable, designed for work and play.

Then came the 'Jeep' Wagoneer. A revolution! The Wagoneer is so revolutionary, it's hard to recognize your old 'Jeep' friend. It's a station wagon. And a looker! You'll be stunned. Slide into that luxurious interior. Beautiful. Comfortable. Visibility unlimited!

*Optional items at slight extra cost.

Turn the ignition key. You've got an overhead cam engine purring for you. The only one in any American production car. Try that steering. Power. The brakes. Power again.* The transmission. It's automatic.* Feel that ride. Pure luxury.

And the 'Jeep' heart and spirit are still there. Pull one simple lever and you're in 'Jeep' 4-wheel "Drivepower."† Then there's hardly a hill that can keep you down... hardly a mud hole that can bog you down. In fact, there's scarcely any driving situation that can get you down. You're free to go anywhere with the traction to pull you through.
